WIRE BRIEFS

500 Victimized By Pickpockets

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Police said today that some of the vast throng that filed through St. Peter's Basilica before the body of the Pope were not there just to mourn. Five hundred persons reported their pockets picked in the crowd, police said.

'Hot Line' Okay

GENEVA (UPI)—United States and Soviet negotiators have reached agreement on establishing a "hot line" teletype link between the White House and the Kremlin, highly authoritative sources said today.

Shutdown Threat

PORTLAND (AP)—Some 19,000 United States Pacific Northwest lumber workers may be idle by tonight if four major employers go through with plans to shut down their plants.

Deaths Reported

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (Reuters)—Unconfirmed reports reaching here today said two whites were killed and three wounded in fighting in the Katanga copper mining town of Kolwezi this week. Another report quoted by the South African Press Association said "a lot of Europeans and Africans" were killed in "heavy fighting" in Kolwezi Wednesday.

BURIED IN ST. PETER'S

Fear of War Haunted Pope

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—Pope John XXIII, the 261st pontiff, was laid to rest in the crypt of St. Peter's Basilica tonight, a few yards from the remains of St. Peter, the first pope.

The Pope's body was carried from the basilica itself and through the door of St. Martha down to the crypts below—where his predecessors lie—after the cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church paid their final homage to the pontiff.

As the Pope had requested, only a few persons accompanied the coffin to the crypt—his peasant relatives, six cardinals and several canons of St. Peter's.

The coffin will be moved once again to the palace of St. John Lateran next to the basilica being converted on the late pontiff's orders into the headquarters of the diocese of Rome.

The Pope—who was also Archbishop of Rome—asked in his final testament, made public today, that the palace be his final resting place.

Earlier, a tide of humanity, perhaps 2,000,000 strong, paid homage to the Pope, who dedicated his life to a fight for peace and died fearing war.

Msgr. Loris Capovilla, the Pope's personal secretary, said one of the masses and then told the mourners that Pope John had said on his deathbed: "I am afraid. I am afraid."

Beacon Hill Swans Guard Lone Cygnet

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Raising a family, even in peaceful Beacon Hill Park, is a hazardous business.

Of two cygnets hatched by a swan on an island in Fountain Lake last Monday, only one remained today. The other had disappeared when Times photographer Bill Hallett visited the lake—and no one knows what has become of it.

This was the first blessed event of its kind in the park for seven years, according to parks administrator W. H. Warren, and it was hoped the two cygnets would survive.

"Our swans have been sterile in recent years," Mr. Warren said. "One contributing factor might be that nesting swans have been disturbed by the increasing number of visitors."

Other species of wild birds are nesting in the park. But their young are threatened by well-meaning citizens who pick them up and turn them over to the authorities.

"If young birds are seen under trees or shrubbery, the nest is sure to be close and they should be left alone," said caretaker H. W. "Sandy" Hayton.

He added that blackbirds, killdeer, and robins are the most numerous among the young that are now being hatched in the park.

2 Suspects Released

MONTREAL (UPI)—A police grab-bag of 14 suspected members of a terrorist underground movement was cut to 12 today with the release of two for lack of evidence.

The red-haired beauty, whose affair with minister John Profumo caused his resignation Wednesday in a scandal that rocked the nation, was taken from the court when she shouted "Why don't you shut him up" as the singer testified in the prisoner's box.

Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon said "regardless of all those things she has caused me, I have loved her with all my heart."

Miss Keeler, 21, says Gordon, 31, her onetime lover, attacked her outside her apartment—punching her, and kicking her in the chest.

Gordon startled the court when he said he wanted to subpoena osteopath Dr. Stephen Ward, who has been linked with the model and with Profumo. He said Christine told him she had known Ward since she went to live with him when she was about 14 and had been working as a call girl since she was 17.

He said he met Christine about two years ago in a London restaurant.

The model denied Wednesday that she had been expecting Gordon's baby when she disappeared before a trial at which she was the star witness and went to Spain.

Tories Shaken By Scandals

(Times News Services)

LONDON—Prime Minister Macmillan's government was rocked today by its biggest scandal with the admission of its war minister that he stood up in the House of Commons and lied about his relationship with a red-haired London playgirl.

"What the hell is going on in this country?" asked the Daily Mirror, Britain's largest newspaper, in the wake of the resignation Wednesday by John Profumo from his post as war minister.

The political explosion resulting from Profumo's admission threatened to crumble the Macmillan government which had been expected to call new elections, possibly this fall.

The Opposition Labor Party did not rush to the attack against the Conservatives as a result of the Profumo affair. Instead, Labor party leader Harold Wilson, on his return today from Canada, said only that the party might seek an inquiry into the security aspects of the case.

Britain's newspapers gave the Profumo case the full treatment today.

"The scandal is one of the worst to wrack British public life for many years," the Daily Mail said.

Among the scandals that may be held against Macmillan's Conservatives when the election comes are these:

- The conviction of homosexual admiral clerk William Vassall of espionage and the weaknesses in security it disclosed.

- The conviction of a former junior minister, Sir Ian Horbin, for homosexual acts.

- The conviction of shadowy intelligence agent George Blake for being a double agent who betrayed British secrets to the Soviets.

- The conviction of a spy ring led by Russian-born Gordon Longdale and including civil service employees of the British admiralty, who sold

Court Ousts Hysterical Christine

LONDON (Reuters)—Model Christine Keeler was ordered out of the courtroom and dissolved in hysterics today during the trial of the Negro singer she has accused of assaulting her.

The red-haired beauty, whose affair with minister John Profumo caused his resignation Wednesday in a scandal that rocked the nation, was taken from the court when she shouted "Why don't you shut him up" as the singer testified in the prisoner's box.

Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon said "regardless of all those things she has caused me, I have loved her with all my heart."

Miss Keeler, 21, says Gordon, 31, her onetime lover, attacked her outside her apartment—punching her, and kicking her in the chest.

Out of Hospital

Resting at Rouyn, Quebec, is Socred deputy national leader Real Caouette after two weeks' hospital stay. He suffered fainting spells in his office. Party officials said he would relax "for another month or two." A diabetic, Caouette also had a kidney ailment which may mean a late summer operation, a spokesman said. But he is expected in the Commons in late June.

EUROPE TO AMERICA

Two Hour Span New Challenge

By ROGER LANE

NEW YORK (AP)—The finish line is a long way off in the international race for a commercial air transport that will whiz across the Atlantic in two or three hours.

But the U.S. officially is in the running, following President Kennedy's declaration Wednesday that the government will subsidize the building of supersonic air transport.

The president's disclosure came less than 24 hours after Pan American World Airways ordered six of the supersonic planes that Britain and France are preparing to produce jointly.

London and Paris officials viewed it as a strategic boost to their drive to challenge U.S. superiority in the commercial aircraft field.

In turn, word of the Kennedy decision was cheered by plane builders in the United States, and by Trans World Airlines, Pan Am's chief U.S. competitor on overseas routes.

The thing most at stake is prestige, particularly for the United States which long has built the bulk of the world's passenger planes.

Also involved is the ticklish balance of international payments problem that vitally affects the U.S. economy. Sales of U.S. planes and supporting equipment abroad have contributed materially to the country's favorable balance in international trade.

The U.S. is expected to shoot for a plane that will fly 2,000 miles an hour or faster—more than three times the speed of sound.

Costs have been estimated at $1,000,000,000 upwards, and, Kennedy said, will require government subsidy.

The projected British-French "Concorde" aims at roughly 1,500 miles an hour. The two European nations have pooled $500,000,000 for their effort.

QUESTION DATES

Kennedy talked of getting the American model into service by 1969 or before, although some experts believe 1971 or 1972 is

Treaty Talks Open

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—Japan called today for a new agreement with Canada and the United States on sharing of the high seas fisheries of the north Pacific but the U.S. warned that scrapping of the present 10-year conservation pact may cause great friction among the three countries.

Both Canada and the U.S. have unparalleled investments in the conservation of salmon, halibut and other north Pacific fisheries. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall said in opening a conference dealing with Japanese complaints. Any agreement which did not take this U.S.-Canada contribution into consideration would not long endure, he said.

Both Udall and Canadian Fisheries Minister H. J. Robichaud urged the Japanese to allow the existing conservation convention to continue and to seek changes and modifications in it, rather than to try to work out a new convention.

The existing agreement, under which the Japanese agree to abstain from fishing for salmon, halibut and herring in certain areas of the north Pacific on the North American side, lapses June 12 if it is not reaffirmed. Any country can thereafter give one year's notice for terminating the pact.

Canadian officials fear that indiscriminate fishing by an expanding Japanese fleet could wreck the Canadian salmon industry.

WANTS NEW CONVENTION

But Masayoshi Ito, Japan's deputy minister of agriculture, said a new convention should be worked out. The Japanese want to do away with the fishing abstention principle altogether and work out some other form of conservation program.

Japanese are allowed to fish for groundfish but this is hampered by the fact that Japan agreed to abstain from catching halibut in certain areas where groundfish are mixed with halibut.

"Further, the large-scale expansion of fishery of a fourth country into the north Pacific

THE CRISIS IN QUEBEC

Rural Areas and Cities Both Have Grievances

(This is the third article in a series on Quebec's position within confederation. The author, S. Peter Regenstreif, has studied the Canadian political scene so intensely that he was able to forecast the last federal election results with a high degree of accuracy.)

Expectations

The Revolution of Rising Expectations. The present era has been characterized in such terms by many observers and there is no doubt that, of all the regions of Canada, Quebec is the one which is most firmly in its grip.

The revolution takes many forms and it has permanently changed the structure of Quebec politics. It has brought a progressive and dynamic government to power in Quebec city. It has also been responsible for the appearance of two forces which are essentially outside the routine confines of the established party system: Social Credit and the Separatist movement.

These remarkable political developments have their roots in rapid industrialization, explosive urbanization and increased communications, particularly in the use of television. These have all come together, to impose different needs and to arouse new aspirations.

It is incorrect to assume, however, that the effect of change has had uniform impact across the province. After all, the vast area called Quebec contains a complex society, with varying class structure, urban-rural differences and a historic cleavage between French and English that now seems to be intensifying with each passing day.

"The two novel political movements which have emerged in the past few years in Quebec, Social Credit and Separatism, gain their support from the opposite ends of the French-Canadian social spectrum and from different parts of the province.

What support the Separatists have is among some metropolitan (that is, Montreal and Quebec city) professionals, students and intellectuals. On MIAMI, Fla.—Mrs. Lillian Tenney, who is 92 and a motorist, plans to talk with traffic officials about her lack of a driver's licence.

She has been driving horses and cars for 70 years and says all this fuss over her driving status is a lot of folderol. She has a collection of nine unpaid citations and court officials aren't sure what to do.

You simply can't go out and arrest a 92-year-old lady and you can't have her breaking the law either, said Richard Brinker, court clerk.

"Why, I am an expert, unusually fine driver," said Mrs. Tenney, who uses a crutch. "People simply keep running into me."

Her 1954 model auto has dents in the fenders but is clean as a pin.

ST. LOUIS—Miss Helen Marx appeared in court on a charge of fortune-telling.

Detective Lorraine Geders testified Tuesday that Miss Marx accepted $12 to forecast her future.

Miss Marx denied the charge and predicted Judge Rodney Weiss would acquit her.

"I'm sorry to disappoint her," Judge Weiss said. "One hundred dollars and costs."

SAIGON—A Buddhist leader was asked by reporters Wednesday whether foreign agents were taking an interest in current unrest among Buddhists over alleged religious discrimination. He replied that the monks at Buddhist temples here thought one visitor might be a U.S. intelligence agent. Then he described the suspect as Allan Ginsberg, beatnik poet who wears long ringlets and a beard and who is a student of Buddhism. Ginsberg has been visiting here.

OTTAWA—Mayor Charlotte Whitton's car was kicked and pounded by a group of youths Tuesday night as the mayor drove toward city hall. The mayor was not touched by any of "30 to 40" youngsters who were swimming from a bridge near the hall.

"It was terrible... a taste of absolute lawlessness," said the mayor. She said the youngsters were running back and forth on the bridge and when she blew her horn "they just swarmed in... hurling epithets."

She later called police and three youths were charged with delinquency.

DAGENHAM, England—The girls in John Sherman's clothing factory worked hard for 4½ days, but on Friday afternoon all they did was talk.

From Monday to Friday noon, the machines buzzed industriously.

But Friday afternoon it was the girls who buzzed instead—about the coming weekend, about their dates, their hair styles, what they were going to wear, where they were going.

Sherman got so fed up listening to the women talk that he announced Wednesday he would give the girls Friday afternoons off in future, with pay.

LONDON—"Mind the glass, love," said a man to a woman looking in a jeweler's shop window Tuesday. The man then produced a hatchet handle, smashed the window, removed a tray of rings worth $600 ($1,800) and fled.

OTTAWA—External Affairs Minister Martin did it again Wednesday. He referred to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker as "the prime minister."

Opposition MPs howled with laughter. Mr. Martin now has made the same slip in the Commons five times in the last week.

JFK Visit Given Hidden Meaning

BONN (UPI)—President Kennedy's decision to keep his date in West Germany this month has led German observers to believe Kennedy considers Germany his instrument of policy in Europe.

German officials are not certain they favor the role.

George McGhee, Kennedy's new ambassador here, described Germany's projected European role as envisioned by Washington in a radio interview a week ago.

"The Federal Republic (of West Germany)," McGhee said,

JAIL TERM FOR BROKEN PROMISE

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Victoria man who broke his promise to a judge will pay for the breach by going to jail.

Duncan Francis Woods, 21, was given an 18-month suspended sentence May 10 when convicted of three breaking and entering charges.

He was ordered to post a $500 bond to keep the peace and be of good behavior.

Seventeen days later Woods was arrested and charged with attempted breaking and entering. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 18 months in jail.

As a result of the second conviction he was brought back to court charged with breaching the original recognition.

Mr. Justice Norman Whitaker Wednesday sentenced Woods to 21 months definite, eight months indefinite for the three break-ins. The sentence is to be served concurrently with the 18-month term.

Anglicans Revive Remarriage Issue

TORONTO (CP)—The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada will be faced with a strong move to approve remarriage of divorced persons when it meets in Vancouver in 1965.

Long a point of debate in the church, the subject received a big push Wednesday when remarriage was overwhelmingly endorsed by the Toronto diocese, the church's largest diocese in Canada.

Only about 20 of more than 500 delegates at the annual synod meeting of the diocese opposed a resolution calling for liberal changes in controversial

Canon 27 dealing with divorced persons.

Passage of the resolution did not change church law. But the strong sentiment for change indicates the general synod will meet stiff pressure to relax the canon.

Anglican-bishops are not permitted to sanction remarriage of divorced persons.

The proposed change in the canon would give every bishop power to examine cases of civil divorce and determine whether there was an "ecclesiastical impediment" which made the marriage null and void in the eyes of the church.

DONALD GORDON
... no holds barred

CNR Unions Get Answers

MONTREAL (CP)—CNR President Donald Gordon met face-to-face Wednesday with union officials representing 85,000 CNR employees for a no-holds-barred question period, and everyone came away happy.

Mr. Gordon, whose appearances before parliamentary committees for similar questioning have frequently resulted in fireworks, was reported pleased with the results. Raul Raymond, chairman of the union meeting, described it as successful.

The meeting was closed to the press—"That's so we can have a completely free exchange of views," said one spokesman—and so there are no outside witnesses to what went on. But Mr. Raymond said the union officials feel "that this is a new phase of communication between management and labor."

LABOR LAWS REVISED

Quebec Would Use Courts In Civil Service Dispute

By JOHN YORSTON

QUEBEC (CP)—Special courts to hear labor disputes involving public service employees will be set up, through a wide-ranging piece of labor legislation introduced in the Legislative Assembly Wednesday.

The measure, which Labor Minister Rene Hamel said is the first part of a labor code, supersedes seven existing laws although it contains many of their principles as well as adding new ones.

Two of the laws to be withdrawn deal with decertification of a union. They provided that a union could be decertified if a known Communist was on the executive or if a union struck against a public service.

The two measures encountered violent opposition from the labor movement when they were passed under the former Union Nationale administration. Under the proposed legislation labor disputes involving public service employees would automatically go before an arbitration tribunal, to be formed of district judges. The tribunal will be permanent.

BOARDS HEAR DISPUTES

At present, public service disputes are heard by specially-appointed arbitration boards, and the House was told by Pierre Laporte, municipal affairs minister, there are 69 boards now working on disputes in as many municipalities.

Mr. Hamel said the legislation "consecrates the adult nature of labor union" and is based on the principle that "the right of association is fundamental."

He said the government does not consider itself bound to "each and everyone" of the 140 clauses contained in the measure.

Beginning June 18, he announced, the House industrial relations committee will hold public hearings on the bill at which interested parties will be heard.

There is some speculation the bill may not be sanctioned by the end of the current session. Some observers feel that once the public hearings are over any amendments may be drafted during the summer and the bill re-introduced next session.

The bill would create a voluntary check-off system for union dues. Any worker whose union represents a majority of employees in a plant could demand that the company dock his union dues from his pay.

Under the legislation, the individual workers could withdraw at any time, if union check-off is not included in any labor agreement.

Other features of the bill included:

1. Abolition of conciliation boards in the negotiation or renegotiation of a labor agreement.

2. With the agreement of the two parties involved, establishment of an arbitration board whose decision would be binding in a private industry.

3. Prohibition of a strike during the life of a labor agreement and institution of the secret ballot during a strike vote.

Mr. Hamel said the Quebec Labor Relations Board will be "reformed" and will have exclusive jurisdiction over squabbles between unions.

COMMONS MOTION

A-Papers To Be Aired

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons passed a motion by a vote of 140 to 64 Wednesday, but no one was sure what the action will bring.

The motion was sponsored by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) and asked the government to produce any document that would prove that the former Progressive Conservative government committed Canada to acquire nuclear weapons.

External Affairs Minister Martin said such documents do exist, but it might endanger national security to make them public in their entirety.

After a heated exchange with opposition Leader Diefenbaker that revived the hottest issue of the April 8 election campaign, Mr. Martin said he will consider the possibility of producing a summary or extracts from the classified documents.

Mr. Diefenbaker repeated his view that his government never made a commitment to take nuclear warheads. He objected strongly to the reservations attached to the motion by Mr. Martin.

"Let us have none of these elaborate productions," he said with visible impatience. "Either produce the commitments or be quiet about them."

The Conservatives insisted on a recorded vote on Mr. Knowles' motion, but they were alone in opposing it.

SUPPORT THE MOTION

The motion, as qualified by Mr. Martin, was supported by members of the Liberal, Social Credit and New Democratic parties. Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary North), who resigned in February from the Diefenbaker government over the nuclear issue, was in his seat but did not vote.

NDP Leader Douglas said outside the Commons that if the government does not supply a summary or excerpts from documents containing a nuclear commitment, it will prove that no commitment ever was made.

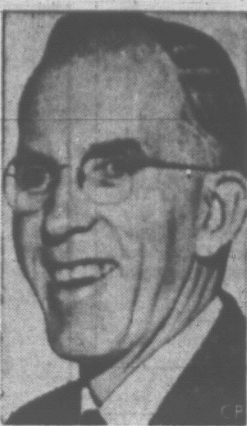

The NDP, along with the Conservatives, contended in the last election campaign that Canada is not committed to acquire nuclear weapons. The Liberals

Suitcase Bomb Rocks Terminal

LONDON (Reuters)—An explosion apparently caused by a bomb in a suitcase today rocked the main continental terminal building at London Airport.

A suitcase believed to have contained the bomb was about to have been put aboard a Portuguese Caravelle jet airliner bound for Lisbon with 77 passengers.

An aviation ministry spokesman said the blast damaged seven or eight other pieces of luggage.

An eyewitness described the blast as a "sheet of flame" in the luggage bay area. He said it seemed like "four minutes before the smoke drifted up and outwards to the main lounge."

An airport official said: "In about another 20 minutes, the suitcase would have been aboard the plane. God knows what would have happened if it had exploded aboard."

Another official said "this looks very much like sabotage."

Seventy-two scholarships worth $10,286 have been awarded to Victoria College students, the college announced today.

Sydney Bulman-Fleming, who led the first year arts class at the college, was awarded the B.C. Centennial Scholarship, worth $500, the Francis Gold Wrist Watch, and the G. B. Stark memorial slide rule prize.

A. R. W. McKellar was awarded the $300 Sir Percy Lake memorial scholarship.

To be eligible for awards, students must take a full year's program of studies and finish with a first class or high second class average.

Complete list of scholarship winners follows:

Battered War Veteran Dies In U.K.

KILLINARDRISH, Republic of Ireland (AP)—Lt. Gen. Sir Adrian Carton de Wiart, 83, the most shot-up general officer in British military history, died Wednesday at his home.

Carton de Wiart, a native of Brussels, was wounded 11 times in the Boer War, in the Somme front, for exposing himself to heavy enemy fire to rally wavering troops.

He saw combat again in the Second World War.

He won the Victoria Cross in the First World War on the Somme front, for exposing himself to heavy enemy fire to rally wavering troops.

At the outbreak of the Second World War Carton de Wiart headed Britain's military mission to Warsaw. He escaped to Romania, returned to London and was made commanding general of the expeditionary force to Norway in 1941.

He was captured while leading the expedition but was exchanged in 1943.

Cigarette Companies Liable, Court Rules

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—The Florida Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that cigarette manufacturers may be held liable for the harmful effects of their products on the human body.

In an advisory opinion written for the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans, the Florida court said it is not essential in such cases for the manufacturer to be aware of the harmful effects of his products to be held liable for damages.

Young Boys Feared Seized By Ring of Sex Deviates

QUEBEC (UPI)—Provincial police said today they suspected an international white slavery racket "for the forced recruitment of young boys for a market for sex maniacs" was operating in the metropolitan area.

"The disappearance of five boys and other incidents force us to such a conclusion," Inspector-General J. Alphonse Matte said in an interview.

So far only one boy was located in the room of an ex-cook in a downtown hostel. Michel

Mercier, 13, of suburban Charlesbourg, was picked up by his father who received a tipoff concerning the boy's whereabouts from an anonymous telephone caller.

MAY BE CHARGED

Police arrested the ex-cook who claimed he had given shelter to an "abandoned child." They declined to identify the suspect but said charges might be laid.

Provincial police are co-operating with local police forces in a bid to smash the ring of suspected sex maniacs.

Blackmail has been ruled out as a motive since all the missing boys come from low-income families. Anxious mothers are now chaperoning their children to and from school and teachers are detaining children until parents or guardians arrive to pick them up after classes.

The Cranky Parliament

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE new Canadian Parliament has gone far enough already to reveal its temper. A very bad temper it is.

Instead of getting on with the public business the Conservative opposition seems determined to continue an election campaign which ended, or should have ended, on April 8 last.

The New Democratic Party, on the other hand, after asserting its principles on the nuclear arms issue, seems willing to co-operate reasonably with the government though criticizing some of its policies. The small western wing of Social Credit, led by the unhappy Mr. Thompson, takes the same view but no one can tell from day to day what view Mr. Caouette's eastern wing will take.

Mr. Diefenbaker's concept of his new position is interesting but perhaps not altogether surprising.

One would have thought that in attempting to re-build the Conservative Party into something broader than a predominantly prairie group, his first concern must be to establish an image of responsibility.

Anyone who expected that kind of behavior in the opposition was quickly disillusioned. Nothing could be more irresponsible than the recent use of a forged document to discredit the government—a forgery disproved not only by the words of the United States ambassador but by laboratory examination. The result, of course, is to discredit the opposition.

But Mr. Diefenbaker knows, or thinks he knows, what he is doing. In his opening speech, which violently condemned a legislative program not then known to him, he said he was reserving his criticism for a later date. Apparently we have not heard anything yet. The major attack is still pending. Meanwhile his flegmen, like Mr. Churchill, are detailed to maintain a daily harassment of sniping shots until Mr. Diefenbaker is ready to unlimber the big artillery.

His purpose is quite clear. He hopes to weaken the government, a perfectly legitimate ambition, and then somehow to create a situation in which the splinter parties will join him in a vote of non-confidence.

It is said in newspapers close to him that Mr. Diefenbaker expects that, if the government is defeated in Parliament, he will be called immediately to office. Surely he cannot think that. For after receiving two clear votes of confidence already, and being assured of others, Mr. Pearson would have an undoubted constitutional right, in the event of defeat, to dissolve Parliament and go to the country as leader of the government. And in that event, if it occurred during the present year anyway, he would almost certainly win a large majority.

Some of the wiser Conservatives understand those dangers very well and are obviously alarmed by Mr. Diefenbaker's knock-down-and-drag-out tactics. The Ottawa Journal, for instance, one of the few Conservative newspapers which stuck with Mr. Diefenbaker through the last election, has sharply warned him to forget partisan politics and deal with the public business on its merits. As The Journal says, what the country demands is not an early election but some sensible progress with its many problems.

Whether Mr. Diefenbaker will listen to this good advice remains to be seen. Up to now he has sought the short-run gains of debating points and mere sensation at the sacrifice of long-run gains that would come from responsibility.

This may be good news, in a purely political sense, for the government but it is bad news for the Conservative Party and the nation. The nation wants its business done. It wants the Conservative Party re-built as a true alternative to the government. Mr. Diefenbaker only wants office, as soon as possible.

The Conservative Party doubtless will come to office again some day but not likely under Mr. Diefenbaker if he continues to regard Parliament not as a deliberative body but as a rip-roaring Saturday night political meeting in a suburb of Prince Albert.

Beyond Reason

THE RECENT DEFEAT OF THE wheat referendum in the United States has brought out discussion of government subsidization of farmers in general. Some of the facts appear incredible.

Mr. Joseph Alsop, the eminent Washington commentator, for instance, sees some new problems arising from the farmers' rejection of the Kennedy plan to restrict wheat production and hence government payments for this product. Since the program was defeated, both production controls and effective price supports appear heading for some drastic changes. Certainly the President is not expected to continue high price supports without controls on production.

There is a compromise plan of aid to wheat farmers with reduced payments to large producers and higher payments to the small producers, the ones in real need of help. This is the plan proposed by Senator Herman Talmadge for cotton growers.

And as Mr. Alsop points out, the cotton subsidy program can certainly do with some alterations. He recalls some items which seem to establish the United States cotton subsidy program as a classic example of how government aid, once instigated, can reach ridiculous extremes.

Consider these facts. The United States cotton program last year cost taxpayers $600 millions in subsidies and $400 millions in administrative expenses. About 31,000 cotton farmers, of the 600,000 total, received more than half of this federal aid. One farmer in California is paid $2 millions each year by the federal government. The five largest producers in the country receive as much as the total given to the 250,000 smallest producers.

Worse still, the arrangement maintains an artificially high price for cotton in the domestic market, and American textile manufacturers are running into serious competition from foreign sources.

Once imposed, such plans seem inevitably to grow worse, as we in Canada, contemplating a growing mountain of government-owned butter and a government subsidy that encourages a continually increasing supply, well know.

The present predicament of the United States government will be watched with interest in Canada. Anything that affects the supply and price of wheat is bound to have repercussions here.

An Act of Good Will

BRITAIN'S HIGH COMMISSIONer to Canada, Viscount Amory, has made the clear statement that Princess Margaret "is anxious to have" the island British Columbia gave to her in 1958 "used in the best interest of the people of British Columbia."

He adds that she no longer considers it practicable to live on the island, as she once thought it might be.

This should pave the way to the solution of the mystery shrouding the future of the island. Some boating enthusiasts have urged that it be made a marine park. The minister of resources and recreation some weeks ago professed no knowledge of action by the princess to turn the island over to the people. Premier Bennett declined to talk about the subject.

Viscount Amory says the matter is one of "some delicacy" between Princess Margaret and the provincial government. This should not, however, stand in the way of her apparent wish to make the attractive property accessible to the public.

If the government decides to accept the island, it will be interpreted as an act of good-will on both sides, for the benefit of all the people.

Who's Biting Whose Hand?

THE WRITER OF "ENTRE Nous" in The Advocate, published by the Vancouver Bar Association, protests that: "The gentlemen who are charged with the enforcement of this (Income Tax) Act seem to have dredged up at their convenience some exquisite tortures of the inquisition to make the lives of lawyers and taxpayers utterly insupportable."

The complaint continues: "Unless you reply to our letter giving us the information required by the day of an assessment will automatically issue, or you will be charged under it in the Police Court with all the attendant fines and penalties, and other multiplied agonies."

This sounds dreadful. But isn't there a simple remedy? Why not turn the whole thing over to your lawyer?

"... I had a wonderful time ... but what a schedule ... Up at 6, polish his boots ... make his breakfast ... 7 o'clock wake him up ... 7:15 fix his bath ... political instruction till noon ... then fix his lunch ..."

FROM WASHINGTON

Discussions Were Kept Behind the Scenes

POPE JOHN is mourned by Catholics, Protestants, and Jews by all men of good will without distinction of belief.

This was a saintly man, no less good because earthy and humorous, whose goodness all men could be sure about. The curious fact is that among the most sincere mourners, there will also be some men of highly dubious and diluted good will. The Eastern European Communist leaders had been hoping that John XXIII would agree to a kind of semi-concordat; and they now fear that the next Pope will break off the contacts that gave hope of agreement.

Politically as well as religiously, these Communist-Vatican contacts have been one of the most interesting and startling features of the remarkable reign of Pope John. Too much attention has been concentrated, however, on the superficial events like the Roman visit of Nikita S. Khrushchev's son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei. The development of real importance, which the Vatican and the church hierarchy did not initiate, was the discussion of ways to regularize the extremely troublesome church-state relations in countries with huge, devout Catholic populations and Communist governments, notably Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia.

The discussions, wholly informal, carefully kept behind the scenes, never characterized as negotiations, began with a feeler put out by the Communist party hierarchy of Poland to the "other Polish government," the Catholic hierarchy headed by the great, wise, and courageous Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski.

Anyone who has spent a single Sunday in Poland—anyone who has seen the young men and boys kneeling in great crowds on the sidewalks at the doors of the over-filled churches—knows the Polish church's potential power. Cardinal Wyszynski has been content to use that power to defend the church's religious freedom and freedom to teach the young.

The foundation for a sort of church-state agreement was well-laid some time ago, when the practice grew up of submitting the names of new bishops to the civil government before their installation. As churchmen rather than politicians have always been nominated, there has been no real trouble about the Polish bishopric; but there has been much friction about religious teaching in the schools.

Apparently the great Polish Cardinal believed that both the church and the Polish people would gain by a regularized church-state relationship in Poland, which would tend to prevent friction over religious teachings and other difficulties that have arisen from time to time. The proof that Cardinal Wyszynski did not object is the simple fact that Polish Embassy-Vatican contacts began in Rome.

What had been produced by these contacts before Pope John's death is still a closely held secret. But it is clear that the affair was well-advanced, most probably in the direction of an agreement to name church and state representatives who would be charged with negotiating out any subsequent church-state differences.

Proofs that the affair was well-advanced are fairly numerous. Cardinal Wyszynski's visit to Rome, to talk about the problem with Pope John and the members of the Papal curia, was one such proof. Another was the visit of Franziskus Cardinal Koenig, Primate of Vienna, to Budapest, with the aim of ending the long seclusion of Jozef Cardinal Mindszenty in the American legation there.

Until recently, at least, Cardinal Koenig was also supposed to make an early visit to Prague, to meet with Archbishop Josef Beran, Primate of Czechoslovakia. The obvious purpose was to talk with Archbishop Beran about extending to Czechoslovakia an agreement already planned to cover Hungary as well as Poland.

All this, moreover, was very much on the mind of Pope John, even on his death bed. One of those admitted to see him, by the Pope's own request, was the Primate of the Ukraine, Archbishop Josyf Slypyi. Archbishop Slypyi's release from Russia was another recent development in the changing pattern of Vatican relations with the Communist governments.

This changing pattern has no doubt shocked a great many worldly people in this country, not to mention the more conservative members of the Papal curia. But neither the Cardinals of the curia nor the Americans who are comparably shocked have had anything like the same opportunity to form a correct judgment as Cardinal Wyszynski has had.

Pope John, on the other hand, was evidently content to take the opinion of this great Polish churchman, leader, and patriot.

As Our Readers See It

Hoodlums

Why is it that so many people in this city can get worked up and hot under the collar over some old land mark being torn down and completely ignore things that are important and very serious.

I am speaking of the hoodlum situation in the Greater Victoria area. We have some good teen-age boys and girls in this city who are law-abiding citizens but who have to put up with abuse and humiliation from these hoodlums. Our youth are being subject to gangs in cars stopping and threatening to get out and beat them up, gang style, for no reason whatsoever, or coming face to face on the street with these gangs and being pushed and shoved around.

If people want to be alarmed about something they should be alarmed about this. No youth who is alone can take on four or more in a fight and expect to come out the victor. It is time the law was changed in dealing with these hoodlums. We have treated them with kid gloves too long. The law has tried correctional schools and probation.

Let's be honest; it isn't working. This type of youth seems to like violence so let's revert back to the paddle for punishment. The paddle straightened out quite a few youths in one of the prairie cities in the 30s, and I'm certain it could do it again.

If something isn't done in the near future the law will have to allow a private citizen to carry a weapon to defend himself. This situation can only get worse.

R. B.

Is It 'Sneaky'?

Is it considered "sneaky" when the police set a trap to catch a bank robber or a murderer? Not by most law-abiding citizens.

Why then should hidden radar traps be outlawed. After all they only "trap" the law-breaker. Those travelling within the speed limit need never be concerned with them.

With every motor vehicle today a potential murder or suicide weapon, how long can we continue to feel that there is something rather noble and martyred about a motorist caught breaking the law?

A deep sense of responsibility is essential in drivers today if we are to cut down the dreadful toll of deaths and injuries on our highways.

ALSO A DRIVER.

Happy Dogs

With reference to the lady who made remarks about the Scottie and West Highland Terriers in the Victoria Day Parade, saying "Shame," and of the mistreatment with regards to heat, etc.

I am afraid this party who made such a statement isn't very well versed on dog training, and in the care of dogs. I realize she says she has two dogs, but if they are properly cared for in food and strappings and having their nails trimmed, terriers will be hard workers in all kinds of weather. One must realize a terrier is a working dog and, if healthy, will be active and alert. Therefore distance and heat will not hinder him in any way.

I can speak with confidence with regards to the show dogs in the parade as being well cared for. They were exercised and properly conditioned in preparation for this important event, in the Victoria parade.

If these dogs in the parade could only speak for themselves I am sure they would say: We are happy and content and glad to be of service to others. Now give us a chance to get on with the job and stop "yer blathering."

A DOG FANCIER.

Attention, Mr. Gagliardi

It's my opinion that if Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi spent part of his time supporting highway safety with regards to law enforcement he'd be doing himself and his office a lot more justice.

I don't know how old the man is and it's quite obvious to the people of B.C. that he can't set an example with his driving, but he could, with his mouth, at least have a few kind words for the people who are out there trying to keep the highways a pleasure to drive on.

Anyone inclined to speeding or who 1125 Faithful Street.

made it a habit to disregard traffic signs would just love to know where the patrol cars are. They'd have a ball, they'd own all points between; and why not, there would be no fear of being caught. I've done it myself before I was married.

I've grown up a bit since then. I don't even think about where the patrols are now because I try to obey the traffic signs.

So, I say to all the "Phil Gagliardis": You know, as everybody does, when you are breaking the law. You also know you're gambling, so don't cry when you lose.

I have heard this argument before about the police hiding but have never heard a really logical reason "why" they shouldn't. I think it's quite clear who the "sneaky" ones really are and for Mr. Gagliardi to say it's the police is very immature.

Those Mixed Crews

Good old Monty! That is talking commonsense. "Sheer poppycock" is right.

Surely Canada is not prepared to go into this crack-brained scheme of mixed nationality crews for "Polaris" ships. I am sure "Dief" would never have stood for that, and I do not believe that Canada will, either.

LONDON:

Divisible Or Not?

By NORA RELOFF

WHICH nuclear piper—the American or the French will the Europeans choose to follow? This is the real contest now reaching its climax inside the Western Alliance.

President Kennedy is offering the Europeans a share in the cost and control of a surface fleet, manned by polyglot crews sailing around the coasts of Europe, equipped with Polaris missiles pointing towards the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. The missiles would be fired only with United States consent.

President de Gaulle has authorized his Minister of Information, M. Alain Peyrefitte, to state, more clearly than ever before, the French alternative. As the Americans may later leave Europe in the lurch, say the French, the Europeans should group together in a political union and the French nuclear deterrent will then be transformed into a European rather than a specifically national force.

The Russians, they say, might doubt whether the United States would use nuclear weapons to save Europe at the peril of its own cities, and there could be no "credible deterrent" so long as there was a U.S. veto. Only an autonomous European force could provide an adequate shield against Soviet threats.

Both the U.S. Secretary of State, Mr. Dean Rusk, and M. Peyrefitte, have spoken publicly of President de Gaulle's probable visit to Washington in the fairly near future—by mutual consent President Kennedy does not propose to include Paris in his trip to Europe in June. But even if the two leaders meet, their differences on the nuclear issue cannot be talked away.

Defining United States policy at a recent Press conference on Wednesday, Mr. Rusk said: "For present purposes, the unity of the alliance requires commitment to the notion that the defence of North America and Western Europe is indivisible."

The day before, M. Peyrefitte, also addressing the Press, was arguing, on the contrary, that nuclear power should be divided between an American and a European component. However the diplomats may juggle their words, the nuclear deterrent plainly cannot be both divided and indivisible at the same time.

Ambiguous Policy

The situation is complicated by the ambiguity of British policy. Outwardly the British Government is on far better terms with the Americans than with the French. Indeed, since President de Gaulle vetoed British entry into the Common Market, and thus shattered a major plank in the government's party platform, the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan has hardly been on speaking terms with him.

Yet, basically, the Conservative government's nuclear views lean rather towards the "divisible" rather than the "indivisible" notion. The British government is determined to continue to manufacture and retain its own thermonuclear warheads, even though it has found it more economical to purchase American vehicles for carrying them across sophisticated defences of the potential enemy.

Although at last week's Ottawa conference, the British agreed to place their own nuclear bomber force under NATO command, there was the express reserve action that it could be detached and reintegrated into the British forces on issues vital to the national interest.

The case for the immediate creation of a multinational nuclear naval force, which has now become the primary target of U.S. NATO policy, does not indicate any feeling among United States leaders that they need an increment of nuclear power in their race with the Soviet Union. On the contrary, it has been calculated that there is enough destructive potential in the existing American arsenal to destroy all humanity 20 times.

To argue—as did Field-Marshal Viscount Montgomery in the House of Lords—that, from the military point of view, the whole idea is "poppycock" is irrelevant. What the Americans are seeking is not greater fighting strength, but the creation of a joint force which might deliver the Europeans from the nightmare that the Americans might desert them, and yet will discourage them from following the French alternative of supporting a separate nuclear force of their own.

To the Americans, the value of the mixed-man force, in contrast to the inter-allied nuclear grouping agreed on at Ottawa, is that it should be a living demonstration of the "indivisibility" of the NATO deterrent and, in fact, once created, it would be as hard to break down into its national components as to re-create the separate eggs out of an omelette.

Sympathetic Hearing

The British are not saying "no" to the American plan. On the contrary, when U.S. Vice-Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Ricketts, comes to discuss the question with British naval authorities, they will be instructed to give him a sympathetic hearing.

If the Americans insist enough, the British government will almost certainly make some financial and hardware contribution to the mixed-man force. Now that Britain no longer makes its own missiles, it remains a nuclear power only on American sufferance and cannot afford to be too unco-operative.

But for the time being the British government also intends to continue with a detachable force of its own, and — with France struggling hard to catch up — United States prospects of maintaining the "indivisibility" of the Western deterrent seem unpromising.

Meanwhile, President de Gaulle's principle of a separate European nuclear force is gaining advocates on both sides of the Channel, and even of the Atlantic. Republican Party leaders, including Mr. Nelson Rockefeller, have urged that the United States should sponsor a European nuclear force. In Europe, M. Jean Monnet and other leading proponents of European unity are urging Britain and France to get together to give Europe its own joint nuclear force.

Whereas previously proponents of political unity in Europe argued that a joint force would come after the creation of a Federal Europe with a single Defence Ministry, the idea is now reversed. A joint nuclear force is recommended as a means of breaking the deadlock between Britain and France, and forwarding European unity.

...REPORTING

OTTAWA—There's a surprising amount of concern in official Ottawa, noticeable even among military officers, over what is foreseen as a danger the civil authorities, the government, will lose some of their control over the military authorities as a result of the operation of the Commons' new defence policy committee.

I think that an ascendancy of military power over civil in this country is highly unlikely, but I am glad to see the concern being expressed. The saying that vigilance is part of the price of democracy is a cliché, but it's also a truism.

Firm civil control over the military, so there's never the slightest doubt as to who's boss, is a cornerstone of Anglo-Canadian parliamentary democracy. In many other countries where military leaders hold the real power—for example, in the Argentine, Spain, Pakistan and Thailand—democracy is only a decorative facade. It's an ineffective protection for those inalienable citizens' rights that our fellow Britons to the south of 188 years ago summed up as "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Where power is the sword, the common man fares ill.

The United States is a democracy. The civil power there is unquestionably dominant. Yet the concern I discern here is lest our generals become "like the American generals." The fear is that the defence policy committee may become a forum for military dissertation on policy, for the airing of disputes between the elected leaders and the brass, for the dissemination of service propaganda, and for the application of pressure on the body politic, and indirectly on the government, to do or not do certain things in accord with the wishes of the military.

The danger isn't just that we, too, might have our Yalu River. It is also in the exacerbation of situations, national and international, when generals shoot off their mouths like Bofors guns. Remember the U.S. general who helped the cause of world peace by boasting the U.S. could "knock the hell out" the Russians? In comparable circumstances one of our General Blimps might produce his own national unity policy: he would "knock the hell out" the Quebec separatists.

Military determination of governmental spending is another danger: we'd have defence hardware coming out our ears, industrial fat cats and free frigides—all like the Americans, but without the Americans' economic strength. And, of course, the more jets, subs, choppers, bobcats, armor and missiles the less money for social security.

Prime Minister Pearson intends that only the defence ministers shall speak on policy to the committee. The service chiefs will be told to stick to facts and stay away from policy. Will they? The Liberals will not have a majority, and the Liberal chairman rejecting a question can be overruled.

And what of these facts the brass is polishing up? Are they being selected to support lines of argument the opposition will be fed privately?

This was conceived as a committee to consider and draft policy for the government's guidance. Yet the committee is not to be told all the facts, but only such information as is unclassified.

It'll be like driving on a dark night with your parking lights on. Small wonder if the committee runs off the road.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

All the News That's Fit to Eat

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Each morning when I sit down at the breakfast table, I eat a bowl of wheat flakes and read a newspaper.

In all the years I have been doing this, it never once occurred to me that I might some day be reading the wheat flakes and eating the newspaper.

My mind simply doesn't run in those channels, particularly at such an early hour. But the mind of a congressman does.

I call your attention to a recent exchange of letters between Rep. John H. Dent (D-Pa.) and Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman.

"I have been saving, for the past three weeks, all of the printed material coming from the various departments... as well as the volumes of reports from the government agencies of all kinds," Dent told Freeman.

More reports are printed than anyone could possibly leaf through, let alone read, he noted. In addition, Congress consumes a great deal of paper, as do the daily newspapers, he said.

The contemplation of all that paper gave Dent an idea. He suggested to Freeman that the vast amount of printed material might hold the key to solution of the surplus grain problem.

West

Since the Japanese make paper from rice, and Latin Americans make paper from sugar cane, it might be feasible for us to make paper from wheat and other grains, Dent said.

In other words, the surplus reports would be printed on the surplus grain. Or, as Dent put it, "If we can't eat our surplus food grains, we may be able to read them."

He offered to introduce legislation setting up a study program if Freeman thought the proposal had merit.

In reply, the secretary informed Dent that the department was doing research along those lines and was "making good progress in several directions."

"This country uses around 35 million tons of paper products each year, and to supply even a part of this market would provide a substantial outlet for grain," Freeman said.

Maybe so, but I fear such a program would cause complications of the sort that Dent and Freeman apparently have overlooked.

Most newsprint and paper stock used in this country is made from woodpulp. If we started using paper made from grain, what would that do to the timber industry?

I'll tell you what it would do. It likely would create a surplus of woodpulp.

Then, the next local step would be for the timber industry to undertake a research program to find a way to use woodpulp for a breakfast cereal.

That, in turn, would create another grain surplus, and a lot more government reports.

HOME GARDEN

Rock Plants Need Hair Cuts

With many of our gardening jobs it is fortunate a case of "better late than not at all."

If we have neglected to cut back those early spring rock plants which gave us so much satisfaction, it is a good idea to tackle a few plants each day until the job is finished.

There are two reasons for this drastic cutting back, or hair cutting as we like to call it. One is to lengthen the plant's life of usefulness by making it more healthy, and the second is a result of the first, for blooming is increased on the gradually enlarged plant.

The purple and mauve aubrieta (this spelling is now internationally accepted as correct) which some people call blue, is one spring blooming rock or edging plant to benefit greatly from being cut back.

An easy, quick method is to gather all the growths together in the left hand and cut through them with the secateurs or large sharp scissors one half the length of the growth.

A little screened compost and sand pushed beneath the remaining stems, followed by a watering if soil is dry, will soon bring on a mass of new shoots.

Before long, the mats will be densely green again and a few flowers may appear in fall. If left to themselves, the plants produce new shoots only at the end of the old ones which flowered, so that the mat straggles and struggles along with the new shoots getting further away from the source of food supply in the roots.

Other plants which benefit from the same treatment are the white arabis, the various creeping rockery phloxes and creeping veronica. The rockery campanulas which are now in bloom can be done when they have finished flowering.

The yellow alyssum needs some trimming also, but that is mainly a matter of cutting back the old stems which have flowered, to prevent seeding. Leave the newly-formed shoots at the base for growing into flower next year.

Prejudices Taught In Quebec

QUEBEC (CP)—A group of Laval University researchers say history textbooks in Quebec primary schools, both French and English, are "excellent material to teach prejudices."

Some characteristics of the texts, said Prof. Andre Juneau of Laval at the Learned Societies conference Wednesday, are erroneous facts, omissions of important dates, and the treating of certain historical figures as saints instead of simply as persons.

The texts introduced "much important bias" in Canadian history.

Professor Juneau was reporting to the Canadian Association of Education Professors on results of a study undertaken during the last five years under the direction of Laval psychologist Aimee Leduc.

JAPANESE WILL GET LEFTOVERS

VANCOUVER (CP)—North American navies will get the gravy this week. The sailor-boys from Japan may have to settle later for the beans.

With the maritime festival in full swing here, city council has set aside a grant of $1,000 to entertain 1,200 Canadian, United States and Mexican seamen from visiting warships.

If there is any money left over, council says it can be used to entertain seamen from the training ship Kaiwo Maru, arriving June 24.

THEY LAUGHED when we brought out Seagram's Gin with its hint of amber colour. Gins, they said, are traditionally colourless. That's because colourless gins aren't old enough to know any better. Seagram's ages gin in oak casks to a state of total dryness. In the ageing process, Nature adds that amber tint. Beginning to see the light? Try Seagram's Gin.

Living Costs Hold Steady

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian living costs held steady in April, with the consumer price index unchanged at May 1 at 132.3, the record high reached a month earlier, the bureau of statistics said today.

The index—a prices yardstick based on 1949 price levels equalling 100—remained unchanged as declines in food, clothing, tobacco and alcohol prices offset increases in costs of transportation, health and personal care and recreation and reading. The housing index was unchanged.

The May index was 1.7 per cent above the May, 1962, index of 130.1.

The index at May 1 held steady after a rise in salaries and wages in March. The index of average industrial wages and salaries for April 1—latest date available—was 193.2, compared with 192.9 a month earlier and 187.2 a year earlier.

FOODS LOWER

Lower prices in April for eggs, fats, lettuce, oranges, pork, veal, chicken and turkey resulted in the food index decreasing six-tenths of a point to 128.3 at May 1 from 128.9 a month earlier. Prices rose for milk, sugar, jams, most fresh and canned fruits and vegetables, orange juice and beef.

The clothing index rose fractionally to 115.6 from 115.7. Decreases in men's and women's wear offset higher prices for children's wear and footwear.

Lower prices for cigarettes moved the tobacco and alcohol index down to 117.8 from 117.9. The alcoholic beverages component was unchanged.

U.K. Exporters 'Have Reason To Complain'

LONDON (CP) — The Economist, British financial weekly, says British exporters "have reason to complain" of difficulties posed by Canadian customs laws.

In an article entitled Canada Could Help, the periodical says the "full rigors" of the Canadian legislation came to be felt by British exporters under the government of Prime Minister Diefenbaker and "it is perhaps possible to hope for some improvement" under the regime of Prime Minister Pearson.

"A few words changed in the legislation would suffice," says the Economist.

The Economist says Canada's anti-dumping laws are not aimed deliberately at Britain—they apply to all countries—but "the fact is that they work that way and are causing serious losses of competitive British trade to Canada."

Hesslers Products Ltd., nine months ended April 30, 1963, $812,000 ($2.50 a share); 1962, $725,000 ($1.71).

The transportation index rose 1.4 points to 40.6 from 139.2, largely as a result of higher transit fares in Toronto at the beginning of May. The increases were rescinded May 20.

CARS COST MORE

The automobile operation component of this index also increased, with higher prices for gasoline and automobile insurance. New passenger-car prices also were higher.

Price increases for pharmaceuticals and for supplies and services for personal care resulted in the health and personal care index rising to 162.6 from 162.1.

The index of 30 industrial materials rose to 257.7 from 254.2 in the period from April 26 to May 24. The index of Canadian farm products at terminal markets also rose in the same period to 222.7 from 217. Both indexes are based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

HBC Shares Will Trade At Toronto

TORONTO (UPI) — Shares of the world's oldest chartered trading company, the Hudson's Bay Company, will be posted for trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange beginning Friday.

The listing consists of 13,553,428 ordinary shares valued at one pound sterling each. The total issue authorized is $15 million.

The company, whose chartered name is "The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England Trading Into Hudson Bay," was incorporated in 1670.

In addition to the company's important activity of retailing, it remains the world's largest fur trading organization. The Bay also retains mineral rights on about 4,500,000 acres of western Canadian land.

The firm acquired 10 department stores in eastern Canada under the name of Henry Morgan and Company in December, 1960.

The 49-Day Ordeal in The Canadian North

Ralph Flores, 42, a Mexican-born U.S. citizen and Helen Klaben, 21, a pretty Brooklyn-born girl, struggling for survival and holding on to life with ferocious tenacity, miraculously emerged alive after a 49-day ordeal in the wilderness of northern British Columbia in sub-Arctic winter conditions when their small, ill-equipped plane crashed last January. The survivors disclose their dramatic story in full for the first time to writer Thomas Whiteside, and through exclusive Canadian rights, to Times Weekend Magazine readers this Saturday.

GAS SALES IN CANADA SHOWED GAIN IN '62

OTTAWA (CP) — Gross sales of gasoline in Canada in 1962 rose 5.7 per cent to 4,270,011,000 gallons from 4,037,986,000 in 1961, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said Wednesday.

Net sales of diesel oil in Canada excluding Nova Scotia climbed 7.4 per cent to 153,571,000 gallons from 143,042,000 in 1961.

Sales of gasoline were up in 1962 in all regions. Year's totals were in thousands: Manitoba, 248,788; Saskatchewan, 301,427; Alberta, 599,470; British Columbia, 399,114; Yukon and Northwest Territories, 11,417.

Look at it this way. If Gilbey's Gin didn't make superb drinks, would it have been sold all over the world for nearly 80 years? We hardly think so.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — Broadway's been reading the Bible. The people are still interested in religion.

They must be—otherwise, I wouldn't be getting all this mail about the Seventh Commandment.

It happened strangely. I was doing a radio interview one night recently in Peacock Alley at the Waldorf with Hildegard, "the dear that made Milwaukee famous."

Groping for something that would be amusing, I asked Hildegard for some of her fractured French.

Usually frothy and frivolous, Hildegard now was impatient with those questions. She wanted to talk about her book, "Over 50, So What?"

The last chapter, she said, was religious. In it she interpreted the Ten Commandments according to her own study, experience and contemplation.

Beg Your Pardon

That was it! I pounced in. "What's your modern day interpretation of the Seventh Commandment—Thou shalt not commit adultery?" I asked her.

"That's not the Seventh—it's the Sixth," Hildegard exclaimed.

"I beg your pardon, dear," I said. "It's the Seventh."

"You're wrong, Earl!" she fired back. "It's the Sixth."

Now a year ago if somebody had asked me which commandment it was, I wouldn't have been able to guess. But now I suddenly felt I knew. For there was recently brought out a book, titled "The Seventh Commandment," by T. H. Tracy, about divorce and adultery, which I had read.

And, besides, the Sunday before, when I attended services at the Broadway Evangelical Church, I had noticed in the back of the hymnal that No. 7 was the commandment against adultery.

But suddenly Hildegard was so adamant that I dropped the argument... for the moment.

At my desk at 3 a.m., I looked into my books... "Adultery: Any lewdness or unchastity of act or thought, as in violation of the Seventh Commandment. Matt. v. 27, 28," said Funk & Wagnalls.

Wrong

Pleased with myself, I went home. My Gorgeous Mother-in-Law, 77, a Catholic, was up, even as I was rummaging through my King James Bible and finding further ammunition.

"It's the Sixth," she said to her Methodist son-in-law, me. "Here it is in the Catholic catechism."

Hildegard, a Catholic, was right, and so was I! And neither of us had ever known before that there was a different arrangement in the numbering between Protestants and Catholics. That set me to wondering about the Jewish numbering. I called a rabbi.

"The Seventh," he said. And he explained to me that this was, of course, an ancient difference, perhaps not commented upon particularly in this generation, but well known to real students of the Bible.

One Good Result

A few letter-writers denounced me, claiming I was wrong. A few congratulated me for not losing my religion in the big city. A lot of people suddenly looked into their Bibles to see who was right.

My wife, I'm sure, was quite startled to know that I was right in my religion—even if wrong in hers.

Hildegard was enthralled and fascinated by the whole discussion.

That a couple of old friends like us should discuss, of all things, religion!

"It had one good result," Hildegard said.

"What was that?" I asked.

"Got you to read your Bible a little," she said.

"Thank you," I said.

"And another thing," she said. "Yes...?"

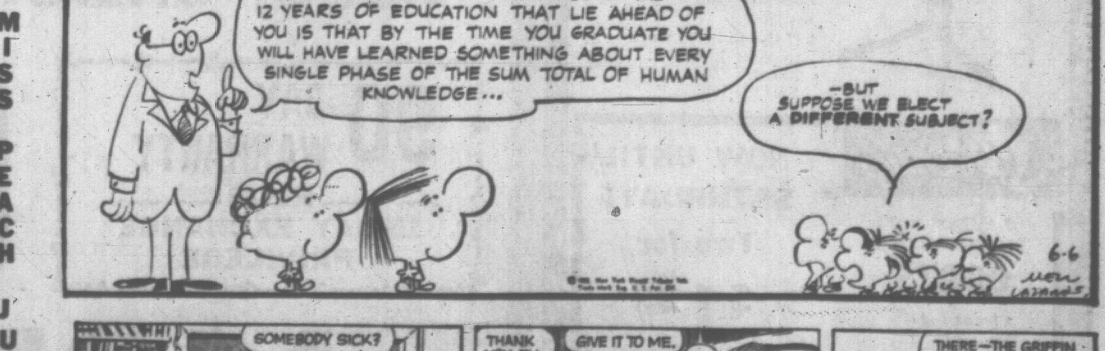

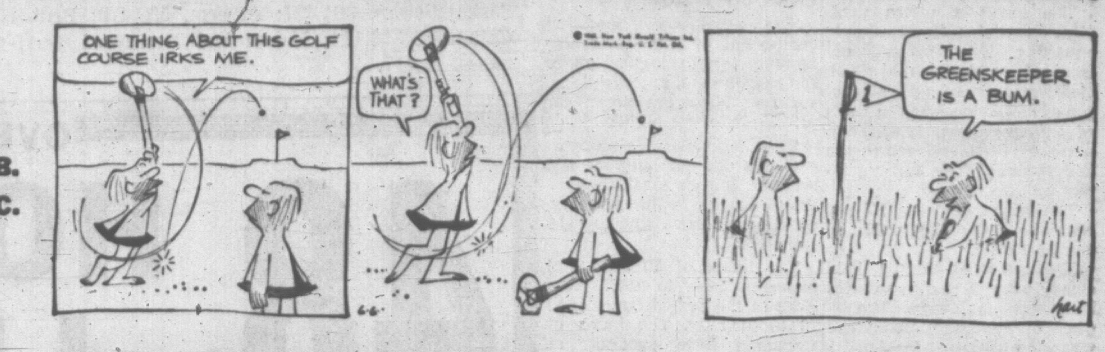

"How does it happen that you know so much about the 'adultery' commandment, my dear? You could have asked me about 'Thou shalt not steal.' That's different, too, you know..."

Try and win an argument with a woman!

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A nurse told a nervously expectant father: "No, the fact that you've been kept waiting a long time doesn't necessarily mean it'll be a girl."

EARL'S PEARLS: One of these days, insists Paul Light, space flights will be so common that a returning astronaut won't even hear from the president.

TEEN-AGE CANADA

That Music (?)
Do You Like It?

By JACK HUTTON

I've a confession to make. I may be losing my grip.

Strictly as an experiment, I sat down last week end and listened to six hours of the latest creations (can you call them that?) from the brains and guitars of our hit parade czars.

After all, someone has to find out what's happening in the streetcorner world of the transistor radio. Sometimes I watch and wonder if a twitly listener is secretly listening to Mars.

Six hours after I turned on a hit parade station and started to shuffle through some borrowed records, I thought my head had been on a giant turntable.

Perhaps the greatest shock was hearing a former idol, Frankie Lane, moaning "Don't Make My Baby Blue." I remember Frankie when his jazz group was one of the best anywhere. Now someone is practising guitar behind him.

And have you heard "Detroit City"? That's the one in which the fellow sobs, "I wanna go home" every few lines. I had only one question. Why doesn't someone let him go?

I brightened when I heard someone announce "a fine old song from the past," "Star-dust," or perhaps "Sunny Side of the Street." No, it was Jimmy Jones mixing mumbled lyrics with baby talk on "Time-tica-tica-Time."

Way Back In '60

That "hit from the past" came from the vintage year of 1960. Hit parade followers, I decided, have short musical memories. Either that or I'm getting old.

My second biggest shock came when Edie Gorme, a fine singer married to Steve Lawrence came on with "Don't Try To Fight It, Baby," a combination of toneless lyrics and shouted phrases.

Edie and Steve, I decided, must be trying to earn some money quickly to put a new back porch on their home. "Edie," I mumbled beside the radio, "how could you do it?"

Maybe the combined shock of guitars, echo chambers, thumping pianos and finger-snapping mumbled did something to me, but a funny thing happened.

after a few hours. I liked some of the tunes.

It's almost impossible, I'm sure, to listen to Matt Lucas sing "Moving On" without tapping toes. It's an up tempo number in which the guitars set a good rhythm and someone gets some novel effects with sandpaper.

I also like "Black Cloud Hanging Over My Head" and "It Doesn't Matter Anymore." Both were swinging tunes with catchy lyrics. I'm sorry that I didn't catch the singers' names.

When the announcer came to "On Top of Old Smoky," I nodded wisely. At last, here was something from my generation.

Ah, the hours spent listening to Louis Armstrong play this on his trumpet.

A blast of sound hit my right ear. Old Smoky?—this just couldn't be. But it was. A chorus of young ladies, singing almost but not quite out-of-time assured me that Old Smoky "used to be quiet, but it ain't quiet no more."

'Level With Me'

What I'd like to know is whether these are really tunes that teen-agers like. Do you find yourself glowing when Big Dana sings "Danger"? Doesn't anyone listen to Andy Williams sing "Days of Wine and Roses" (one of my favorites)?

Let's find out more about this. Make a careful list of five new tunes you liked best during the past year. If you mail them to me, we'll compare the choices and make up our own hit parade.

Excuse me now. I've got to turn off that radio.

So many of you have written to ask more about the "Canadian Save the Children Fund" that I'll repeat the address of their head office. It's the Canadian Save the Children Fund, 68 Hayter Street, Toronto, Ont.

Many Canadian teen-agers or youth groups who saved $60 to help a less fortunate young person elsewhere have found that they've learned a great deal in exchanging letters.

As I remarked before, it could be a good summer project for your local youth group or half a dozen of you who want to pool part of your summer earnings for a worthwhile project.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Lisa Ellen Swan, age 11, of Celina, Tenn., for her question:

Do All Snakes Shed Their Skins?

A snake sheds his skin several times during his life—and shedding day is not a happy day for the snakey fellow. His old skin is very uncomfortable, and it is no easy job to wriggle out of it. While he is changing, he is quite helpless to defend himself. What's more, he needs a little help or he may get permanently stuck and perish.

A baby king snake hatches from an egg and grows very fast. If he is four inches long as a youngster, he will be eight inches long when it is time to celebrate his first birthday. He may be fully grown to a length of three or four feet when he reaches his second birthday. In any case, he will be full-grown before he is three.

As a snake's body gets bigger, his skin becomes too tight. A new and larger skin begins to grow under the old skin. When the new skin is ready, it waits tucked in loose folds while the old skin withers and dries. The snake is uncomfortable because his old skin is like a tight coat and his new skin is like wrinkled underwear.

When shedding day comes, the old skin cracks around the snake's head. But it still fits his body like a long, tight sleeve, and the poor fellow must wriggle out of it with no hands or arms to help him. He wriggles and writhes to get free. Maybe he finds a rough tuft of grass, a sharp stone or a tree trunk against which he can rub and scuff off strips of his old skin. Sometimes he wriggles free leaving behind the old skin in one piece like a dry and scaly stocking.

All snakes shed their skins several times while they are growing. And later, the skin of a grown snake gets a lot of wear and tear. Mr. Snake wriggles over the soil and the sand, through rocks and maybe into muddy marshes. His skin gets scuffed with scratches and worn with tears.

Snake Must Shed Skin

When his old skin becomes shabby, the adult snake again grows a new one. Like the youngster, he grows it under the old skin, though both skins are about the same size. A young snake may shed two or three times a year, and a grown snake may shed once every year or so. All this shedding is necessary, for a snake's scaly skin must fit properly, stay clean and in good condition.

Some people cannot abide snakes, and others like them enough to keep a harmless snake as a pet. When the snake is about to shed his skin, he mopes and refuses to eat. Then is the time to place a stone or other rough object in his home. Some snake owners put their pets outdoors in the wild where they can find just the right object to help them shed their uncomfortable old skins. Many a pet snake loses his life because his owner does not help him through his skin shedding.

Few Reminders Today Of D-Day Excitement

PARIS (AP)—Nineteen years ago today Allied troops stormed ashore along the bright beaches of the French coast in the drive to liberate Europe from Nazi tyranny.

It was a time of blood and of jubilation, of fierce joy and uneasy fear. For the armed might of Hitler's armies it was the first step toward downfall and defeat.

As years passed by, and the shattering clamor of war faded into memory, D-day lapsed slowly into the limbo of another time, another world.

Today, no flags marked its anniversary in Paris. No parades struttled by in tribute. The men who survived the savage onslaughts of Omaha Beach, at Red Beach, along the curves and sweeps of French coastline, have long since gone.

But they didn't forget today in the sun-washed Normandy countryside, where tribute was paid to those who died. Memorial masses were said and wreaths were placed at little towns whose names were jawbreakers for young men fighting in a strange land: Ranville, Bernieres, Arromanches, Assnelles, Ver sur Mer, Ermanville sur Mer, Bayeux, Caen.

At Omaha Beach, where thousands of white crosses rise from the quiet greenery, there were brief ceremonies. At the British cemetery a memorial service was held and the Canadians paid tribute to their dead there as well.

submarine secrets to the Russians.
But what the Times of London called Profumo's "shocking admission" drew the biggest headlines of all.
The scandal ended the political career of one of the most promising younger members of the Conservative party. Profumo had most of the ingredients of success: A beautiful wife, former actress Valerie Hobson; education at Harrow and Oxford; a distinguished army record in the Second World War, during which he rose to the rank of brigadier; the youngest member of Commons at the age of 25, and regular promotion in government posts.

The first whispers of the affair were heard in March. The Daily Express reported March 14 that Profumo had agreed to resign for personal reasons. The government denied it.

REPORT MODEL MISSING
During the same period London papers were reporting that model Christine Keeler was missing after failing to appear at the trial of another Negro who was convicted of trying to shoot her. Rumors eventually connected her with Profumo, and it was whispered she had been hidden as protect persons in high place.

March 22, Profumo admitted in Commons he knew Miss Keeler socially, but said there was nothing improper in their relationship. He denied having anything to do with her disappearance and threatened to sue anyone who challenged his story.

May 7, Dr. Stephen Ward, a high society osteopath who had entered Miss Keeler, Profumo and others, wrote Home Secretary Henry Brooke that Profumo's statement about Miss Keeler had not been entirely true.
It was understood Ward also wrote similarly to Labor Party Leader Harold Wilson, now visiting in Canada.

EDE SEEKS INFORMATION
In the Commons Chifor Ede, former Labor home secretary, gave notice he intended to ask Brooke "what information he has received from Dr. Stephen Ward in connection with inquiries carried out by the metropolitan police and what action he proposes to take." Brooke was due to answer in Parliament June 20.

Parliamentary informants said many legislators believe that it was this innocent-looking question, loaded with political dynamite, that triggered Profumo's confession.

If the U.S. decides to try for the faster plane, it will be gambling that the time lag in putting it into the air will be offset in the market place by its greater speed, a prime factor in airline competition.

No price was mentioned in Pan Am's announcement, although industry estimates were in the $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 plane range — compared with the $6,000,000 tag on today's jets.

The U.S. has talked about building a supersonic plane for years but took little firm action until Wednesday beyond feasibility and financing studies and setting aside about $30,000,000 to pay for them.

Robichaud agreed that the intermingling of various fish stocks is the knottiest problem to be resolved in the north Pacific but he said he is confident that with continuing goodwill and effort, "we shall overcome all obstacles and continue with the rational use of the resources of the sea."

The minister urged that the present convention be retained with the abstention principle. He indicated the convention could be improved by supplemental agreements to meet new situations.

Chant Happy With Results

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia is developing one of the best integrated high school education systems to be found anywhere in the world, Dean J. F. N. Chant said today.
The UBC professor who headed a royal commission which came up with recommendations for a complete revision of the province primary-secondary school system some three years ago said B.C. students should feel fortunate that such an excellent system is being developed.
He told an interviewer that a diversity of programs at the high school level will lead to an equal diversity in post-high school education and like hand in glove.
The public school reorganization recommended in the Chant report now is going forward while recommendations for new universities and junior colleges students of different talents and ability," he said. "Nobody will have government approval."

Transpore got their tally with only one hit, a double by Brent Siddons in the sixth.

Laurie Kerr on Deck To Defend City Title

Kerr can expect strong challenges from a number of fairway stars, including Bill Wakeham, Gary Smith and Bill McColl, in the 54-hole tourney. Not listed among the entries are veterans George Bigelow, Bob Morrison and Vic Painter.

Golfers will play 36 holes Sunday and finish with 18 the following weekend. Low 24 in net and gross will qualify for the final round.

Sunday's starting times:

No Takers for Harvey

MONTREAL (CP)—New York Rangers have let it be known they are willing to part with defenceman Doug Harvey, one of hockey's greatest stars.

Rangers left Harvey unprotected from the National Hockey League's internal draft Wednesday, leaving him prey for any of the other five NHL clubs willing to grab him at the waiver price of $20,000.

But there were no takers. Coach Milt Schmidt of Boston Bruins, NHL ocellar - dwellers last season, apparently wanted Harvey, but was over-ruled by Bruins' owners.

Schmidt said there were "50,000 reasons"—the waiver price and the $30,000-a-year contract Harvey is supposed to have with Rangers—for not taking the defenceman.

Harvey, a long-time super-star with Montreal Canadiens who has been with New York as a player and coach for the last two seasons, is 38.

The draft, which wound up the NHL's three-day annual convention, was a dull affair during which only six players were picked up by Detroit, Boston and New York.

Rightwinger Andy Heberton and Howie Young, Detroit's bad-boy defenceman, were the only name players exchanged in final day proceedings.

The 33-year-old Heberton, who hasn't missed a game with New York in eight seasons, got caught in the draft. Rangers left him unprotected, and he was snatched up by Boston. Heberton won the Lady Byng Memorial Trophy in 1959 as the most gentlemanly and accomplished player.

Following the draft, Detroit announced it had traded Young to Chicago Black Hawks in completion of a deal carried out Tuesday, when Red Wings got defenceman Ron Ingram and rookie goalie Roger Crozier of St. Louis. Young, perpetually in trouble because of ice tantrums that got him unnecessary penalties and his habit of disappearing from the team, will probably end up with Buffalo of the American Hockey League, the Chicago farm team.

FEW EXCHANGED

Drafting resulted in the fewest number of players exchanged in several years.

Boston also picked up Detroit's Wayne Rivers, 21-year-old rookie who played last season with Hershey of the AHL. At the $20,000 draft price, Detroit shelled out $140,000 for new talent, including four players acquired Tuesday in the minor league draft.

The three who went to Detroit Wednesday were Irvin Spencer, 25, a forward-defenceman with Boston; Edward (Ted) Hampson, 21-year-old New York centre who scored only four goals last year; and Art Stratton, Chicago-owned centre who toiled with Buffalo last season amassed 20 goals and 70 assists.

New York grabbed Val Fonteyne, left unprotected by Detroit, a 29-year-old left winger who scored six goals and 14 assists last season.

MOORE PROTECTED

Dickie Moore, who announced his retirement last spring, was kept on Montreal's protected list. Moore apparently decided to quit the game because he felt Canadians were ready to trade him. Obviously, Canadiens felt they can talk him into coming back for another season.

SAANICH HEARING

Apartment Plans May Face Fight

Two proposed garden apartment developments will be discussed in Saanich council chamber Monday at 7:30 p.m. and some opposition is expected.

One of the projects would be located behind the Hillside shopping centre; the other on the Saanich panhandle.

Westcott Apartments of Vancouver wants to build a 160-suite garden apartment between Townley and Newton Streets, west of Richmond Road, and will outline its plans to the council Monday.

F. G. Rainsford will present his plans to build a 46-unit garden apartment on the west side of Shelly Street, north of North Dairy Road.

The Westcott development would have a swimming pool and two or three play areas for 82 three-bedroom suites, 66 two-bedroom suites and 12 single bedroom suites in the two-storey apartments.

The Rainsford development would resemble a number of individual houses each joined to the other; but each with its own carport and entrance leading through an enclosed patio to the housing unit.

Councils throughout Greater Victoria have encountered increasing opposition on rezoning applications in recent weeks and Saanich council is no exception.

Hugh Ross, who operates a weaving shop at 2534 Estevan, has taken a first and an honorable mention in the 11th annual exhibition of Canadian hand weaving at Winnipeg.

His entries—a yardage of tweed and a knee rug—were chosen for design, weaving and texture.

At the 1961 Hand Weaving Exhibition in London, Ont., Mr. Ross won the Canadian gold medal with two similar entries.

U.K. Building All-British Satellite

LONDON (UPI)—The government announced today it has signed a contract for the first British-built earth satellite.

It said the guided weapons division of the British Aircraft Corporation has signed a contract to construct the satellite, which will carry a group of experimental instruments devised by British scientists.

The 150-pound satellite will be launched by the United States about four years from now. An earlier British satellite was sent aloft by American rockets, but was built in the United States and carried only British-made instruments.

Sentence Suspended On Charge of Theft

A suspended sentence was imposed on Ken Leibel, 787 Meaford, when he appeared in city police court Wednesday after earlier pleading guilty to possession of stolen property.

Leibel allowed his car to be used in the break-in recently at McMaster's Men's and Ladies' Clothing. Magistrate William Ostler said that in view of Leibel's excellent general character and his passive role he would only impose a suspended sentence.

Jaycee Fair 'Prize' Better Unwon Says BBB

Some of the "lucky winners" at last month's Jaycee fair may find it wasn't good luck, a spokesman for Victoria Better Business Bureau warned Wednesday.

Consider what happened to one couple who filled out the innumerable coupons for free prizes at the fair.

"A couple of men came around to their house the other day and said they had been lucky winners of a free cleaning for a rug or upholstered chair," said the spokesman.

"When they got half through vacuuming the rug, they sat down and said they would finish it if the couple would buy the vacuuming machine."

"The couple repeated previous statements they were not interested in buying anything—so the men packed up and left.

"Now the lucky winners have a half-cleaned rug on their hands."

'RIDICULOUS,' SAY CRITICS

Limited Self-Rule Slated For South African Negro

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—Premier Hendrik Verwoerd's South African government is creating African homelands for millions of non-whites to further its race segregation policies.

The all-white Parliament recently approved a law granting limited self-government to the first of eight such racial enclaves, known as bantustans. The Transkei constitution bill grants an all-black parliament, a flag, national anthem and the official language Xhosa to 3,000,000 Xhosa people in 64,000 square miles of Transkei territory on the Indian Ocean side of the country.

The new law is a far cry from independence for the Xhosa. Final control remains in white hands, and any complete hand-over promises to be a long way off.

Critics say the project is ridiculous and that the blacks are being herded on to South Africa's least productive lands.

But Daan Nel, minister of African administration and development who piloted the bill through Parliament, forecast that South Africa would "be hailed as the creator of a policy that can also be fruitfully applied elsewhere."

The English language Johannesburg Star, often an opposition mouthpiece, said the granting of political rights to Africans in the bantustans would not satisfy the demand of millions of Africans who would continue to live in the white areas. Africans are the main labor force in South Africa's currently booming economy.

Victoria Daily Times 13
THURS., JUNE 6, 1963

The multiracial Liberal party said there is no chance of making the bantustans succeed as self-sufficient economic units.

This feeling is shared by the Progressive party whose single representative in Parliament, Mrs. Helen Suzman, called the bill "a fraud" that would do "nothing whatsoever to dispel South Africa's unfortunate position in the eyes of the outside world."

Opposition also came from the right, with the United Party claiming that the bantustans will become black Trojan horses that pan-Africans will turn against their white sponsors.

About 700,000 Xhosa voters soon will elect 45 members to the Transkei parliament. Appointed chiefs and headmen will make up the rest of the 105-member all-African legislative assembly.

The Transkei parliament's power will be modest, with the central government reserving jurisdiction over defence, foreign affairs, internal security, communications, immigration, currency, banking and customs.

Jury Rules Brown Unfit For Trial

VANCOUVER (CP)—An assize court jury Wednesday found former Victoria football player Douglas Harold Brown, 29, unfit to stand trial after three psychiatrists testified he is mentally unbalanced.

The decision came after a Bible-throwing, shouting scene when Brown was in the witness box.

Brown was charged with capital murder in the rifle shooting of Catholic priest Rev. Cuthbert Seward April 19.

Throwing the court Bible to the floor, Brown told Mr. Justice Harold MacInnes he could have him shot.

Brown shouted: "I am the lord god of hosts, the king of Israel, and the judge of all mankind. I could have you shot but I won't."

An RCMP officer clutched at his sleeve and asked him to sit down, which he did.

Brown said he had spent time in an Alberta mental institution where he was given shock treatments.

Gov't Asked To Return Documents

OTTAWA (CP)—The government was prodded Wednesday to have the RCMP return documents taken from Chinese during the investigation into illegal entry of Chinese immigrants.

Frank Howard (NDP-Skeena) said investigators seized landing certificates, passports and citizenship certificates during the lengthy investigation which was concluded last year. These had not been returned and he urged Citizenship Minister Favreau to see that this is done.

Mr. Favreau suggested the question was not a matter of urgency but agreed to investigate when New Democratic Leader Douglas expressed disapproval of his statement.

Escapee Caught In Sidney Hotel

SIDNEY (CP)—Norman C. McKenzie, 25, one of two British Columbia Penitentiary escapees who led police a merry chase Tuesday was recaptured here early today.

Courthouse Site Left To Council

Duncan Mayor Jack Dobson Wednesday led a delegation to the office of Works Minister W. N. Chant to discuss planning for a new provincial building.

Mr. Chant said afterwards that negotiations are under way for a site for the new Duncan building.

"We have two or three sites in mind, any of which would be suitable," Mr. Chant said. He said Duncan council would report later to him on its preference.

Mr. Chant said construction will start within the fiscal year as promised in the legislature.

LENGTHY EFFORT

Opposition leader Robert Strachan, member for the area, has been pushing for years for a new courthouse.

Mr. Chant said the new building will include facilities for magistrate's court but will also contain offices for other provincial government departments.

Mr. Chant said progress had been delayed while Duncan town planning committee was working on an overall plan for the area and he wanted the new building to conform with local ideas.

School Board Seeks Funds For New Bus

NORTH COWICHAN—Cowichan district school board submitted a request to North Cowichan council Wednesday, to approve the non-sharing cost of a new $15,938 school bus.

The amount was accepted by council, who were informed that the non-sharing cost throughout the Cowichan school district will be $1,438. North Cowichan's share has not yet been estimated.

In a letter to council, public health official, Dr. C. J. G. Mackenzie expressed concern over the present sewage system in the Crofton area, and requested that council begin immediate construction of a new system.

He maintained that the present situation is "a threat to the health" of the community. Council agreed with Dr. Mackenzie, and expressed hope that a by-law can be prepared in the near future.

Council accepted an offer from Evans Sawmill of $7 per thousand feet for a number of maple trees in the Mount Prevost area. Balance of the mature timber on Mount Tzouhalem — over 2,000,000 feet — will be offered for sale, but no hauling will be carried out on the Genoa Bay road until September 30.

Coun. Mrs. Elaine Dobbyn reported progress of the new $3,250,000 Cowichan Hospital, which is expected to be ready for operation by the fall of 1963.

She said plans are progressing slowly, as architects are continuing to confer with medical personnel and hospital staff on the working drawings.

Police here said McKenzie, of Victoria, gave himself up without a struggle when RCMP officers burst into his hotel room and found him in bed with his wife.

RCMP followed a tip from a Mainland-Vancouver Island ferry passenger who said McKenzie told him he was an escaped convict, police said.

Raymond Peters, 33, McKenzie's companion in fleeing a work party at the New Westminster prison, was recaptured after less than two hours freedom. He was serving 12 years for the armed robbery of a city hotel in 1957 and McKenzie was serving four years for false pretences and failing to support his wife.

FLED IN TAXI

Both men led police a merry chase through the heart of the city, taking a taxi from New Westminster to Vancouver, shopping in a department store and drinking in a beer parlor.

Police discounted a theory that McKenzie had escaped a massive six-block cordon, thrown around the hotel where the escapees were drinking by hiding in a car trunk.

They said McKenzie, close to six feet tall, likely would not have been able to curl up inside the trunk of the English car as first believed.

DUNCAN — Unable to pay fines totalling $150 for impaired driving, and driving while under suspension, Roy Charlie of Kokisilah, was sentenced to 14 days at Oakalla Prison Farm.

The sentence will run consecutively with a 14-day term imposed on him earlier this week.

DUNCAN — R. L. Lundahl and Mrs. L. A. Boyle, delegates to the annual general meeting will present their reports at next Tuesday night's meeting of the Duncan and District Association for Retarded Children, at the Arcadian School.

NANAIMO (CP) — Nearly $400,000 in permits for new construction were issued here during May for Community Planning Area Number Six which includes the city.

Total permits for the first five months come to $1,324,653, nearly $400,000 ahead of the same period last year.

NANAIMO — The runway at Nanaimo airport was illuminated for the first time Wednesday night after permission to operate 24 hours a day for private planes was granted.

But the airport is not permitted to operate at night for commercial flying.

NANAIMO (CP) — Tourist enquiries this year are 52½ per cent higher than last year, Recreation Minister Earle Westwood told delegates to the 72nd annual meeting of the B.C. Pharmaceutical Association Wednesday.

"Last year tourism brought $145,000,000 to B.C.," Mr. Westwood said, "and so far we have only scratched the surface of the industry."

"Last year tourists came here from the Seattle Fair and this year promises to be even better."

He said the government is putting on an intensive advertising campaign, with the main aim to keep Canadians in Canada for their vacation.

BUNNY OR BURRO, they both have long ears, even though one is Bugs Bunny, a toy rabbit, and one is a real live donkey named Lightning. Both helped amuse youngsters of the Queen Alexandra Solarium on Sunday, as the Western Horsemen's Club put on a show for the youthful patients. Ted Hamer holds Linda, and Marilyn looks on, as clown Ed Copeland performs the introductions.

Ratepayers to Urge Flood Investigation

NORTH COWICHAN — An official request for investigation into a flooding problem at the Wall subdivision is to be made to North Cowichan municipal council.

The request will be made by North Cowichan Ratepayers' Association, which sent a three-man delegation to Wednesday's council meeting.

Ladysmith Youth Wins $250 Prize

Thomas A. Ausseneegg, a student at Ladysmith junior-senior secondary school, has won first prize of $250 in a province-wide physics examination sponsored by the Canadian Association of Physicists.

A total of 140 students in grades 11 and 12 in 80 B.C. schools wrote the two-and-a-half hour examination prepared by members of the physics department of the University of British Columbia.

Dr. D. L. Livesay, of UBC's physics department, will present the first prize cheque to Ausseneegg at the Ladysmith school on Friday.

Robert Waddy, Nelson Allen and John Cannon said nine houses in the Wall subdivision had been affected by the annual winter flood.

They said the diking by Duncan along the Cowichan River from the Silverbridge Inn had altered the course of the river, causing continuous floods in the subdivision.

Mr. Allen said the law states that anyone changing the course of the river is responsible for the consequences. The river was diked when several houses in the Duncan and North Cowichan areas were damaged following a severe flood in January, 1961.

Reeve Don Morton explained that members of a recent flood control committee had found that a project to curtail the flood threat would be very costly.

He maintained that any project to eliminate the flood problem should be a full-scale program.

Council advised the North Cowichan Ratepayers' Association to make an official request for an investigation.

Trade Unions Rap Council On Ambulance

City council was condemned "in the strongest possible terms" by Victoria Labor Council Wednesday for failing to provide a satisfactory ambulance service.

A resolution was passed by delegates at suggestion of electricians' union member Fred Bevis, after a progress report by secretary A. W. Toone, who is an alderman.

The labor council has long advocated a special ambulance with proper equipment to replace the panel truck "paddy wagon" now used by police.

The fire department is suggested as the custodian and operator of a proper ambulance.

Pressure on city council was effective in having $7,500 placed in the police budget last year for an ambulance, but this year no money was budgeted and the original amount was put in another fund.

An ambulance of the type required costs around $20,000, fully equipped.

Few members of the Canadian Corps of Commissioners understand their own status, council was told.

The statement came from Donald McDonald, secretary of the Canadian Labor Congress, which was asked by council to organize commissioners into a nationally chartered labor union.

The request followed complaints by certain members of the corps regarding overtime work and grievance procedure.

But it is only the latest of many such requests. Mr. McDonald said, pointing out that a CLC investigation was made several years ago without success at forming a union.

He said it was found the corps is a voluntary organization that does contract work with a percentage of earnings deducted for administration and that few members understand their status because there is no employer-employee relationship.

Mr. McDonald sent a number of pamphlets on the subject, which were turned over to council's organizing committee for study.

Members endorsed a protest by carpenters' union local 452, Vancouver, against nuclear armament for Canadian fighting forces.

The union said "election of the Liberal regime was no mandate for the acceptance of nuclear arms."

'White Help' Ad No Help To City Cafe

A Victoria cafe's advertisement stating "all white help" will be reported to the labor department for investigation of unfair employment practice.

Forty-two delegates representing 27 unions voted at Victoria Labor Council Wednesday to protest the advertisement of Astoria Restaurant, 744 Yates, to the labor department and request an investigation.

It is alleged the ad violates the Fair Employment Practices Act.

Council secretary A. W. Toone read the advertisement from an advertising flyer, noting the sheet bore no "bug" designating its production in a union shop.

Five Charged In Call-Girl Crackdown

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police have made five arrests after raiding what they called a new prostitution racket involving both call girls and bawdy houses. They said a "madam" receives a call from her customer, phones a girl at her home and directs both to meet at the house or hotel employed in the setup.

Charged after more than a month of investigation by morality squad detectives were Edith Margaret Young, 42, a housewife; Faye Stark, 22, a waitress; Dorothy Boudreau, 23; Frank Leandro, 45, a miner; and Lyle Raymond Jackson, 23, a dry cleaner. Police said two houses and a hotel in the West End were used.

No Expo Service During Summer

A service like last summer's Expo-Lodging will probably not exist in Victoria this summer.

Designed to help tourists find accommodation, the service can find no financial backer to put up the $2,500 to $3,000 necessary to run it.

The accommodation industry in Victoria is concentrating its tourist promotion contributions this year on the Victoria Visitors' Bureau, says a member of the Victoria Hotels Association.

NO TOURISTS

West Saanich Road Repairs Hinder Trade

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Many small businesses on West Saanich Road will face serious financial losses, perhaps bankruptcy, unless the B.C. highways department steps up its road improvement program.

This claim was made today by Mrs. Mary Osborne, who with her husband, operates a nationally known studio-pottery on the road.

"Small businesses along the road depend to a large extent on the tourist trade," he said. "Unless something is done to complete the work quickly and to divert traffic along the road, some people are going to suffer."

Located along the route are at least two nurseries, three small stores which cater to both the tourist and local trade, and several people who sell jams and home cooking products.

Mrs. Osborne said since the highways department started its road improvement program early in April, traffic has dwindled.

"The road has now been tarred and gravelled and is waiting to be paved. Bad curves have been improved and the road widened."

MAIN FACTORS

"The road is now in a better condition than it was before, but highway department road signs are the main factors stopping cars from taking the route," she said.

She said during the week, the department has two signs at Royal Oak. One of these is a "Sorry to Inconvenience You" sign and the other states that the road is "open to local traffic only." The latter is taken down on weekends.

"These two signs keep cars off a perfectly good road," said Mrs. Osborne. "You would think the department would have some consideration for the livelihood of people along this route."

She said a new sign put up at Butchart Gardens also isn't helping. The sign urged motorists to stay on Route 17 (Patricia Bay Highway).

Mrs. G. Sowden, who operates the Cock Pheasant, said she doesn't know what she will do if traffic is diverted much longer from West Saanich Road.

TOURIST ATTRACTION

"The tourist season has started," she said. "We are not getting any visitors."

She said West Saanich route is a tourist attraction as it brought out-of-town visitors in contact with people connected with rural Saanich.

"The road is attractive," she said, "and the many small businesses are a novelty for visitors."

Paint Jobs Demonstrate 'Harmony'

Painters are busy redecorating two drab buildings downtown which city officials expect will become leading examples of color harmony.

The Greenwood Block, 1010 Government Street, is the official demonstration of how a selected color scheme can dress up a downtown building cheaply.

It is being repainted a pale turquoise with a white and sand trim.

An official ceremony Monday at 10:30 a.m. will see downtown beautification committee chairman Ald. A. W. Toone marking completion of the project which involved donated paint from British America Paint Co.

"I think this project will be an outstanding example of 'before and after' because the buildings around it are quite similar and everyone will see clearly the difference a color scheme can make," said city planner Roderick Clack.

The Dowell Carriage building on Wharf at Bastion Square also is being repainted from a dull grey to a mustard and white combination "which should be very pleasing to the eye," said Mr. Clack.

He added a third block, on Douglas Street, will be started next week.

"We're making some headway in redecorating the downtown area and these projects may prompt more."

Arthur Mayse

In recent years I have observed the growth of a new Canadian sport which I like not at all. This game resembles soccer, except that for a football you substitute the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Maclean's magazine put the game in the big time with a denigrating article this spring.

B.C. Highways Minister Gagliardi, smarting from RCMP tokens received while testing his theory that speed isn't the killer, has clobbered the horsemen time and again in utterances of remarkably un-ministerial calibre.

Now comes the Knott affair, a sequence of blunders for which heads should roll, and for weeks hereafter, 'Mountie' is going to be one degree removed from a dirty word.

This I regret. It distresses me to see one of Canada's proudest traditions dunked in the mud, and to listen while apocryphal tales of RCMP stupidity, brutality and arrogance are trotted out of their hidey-holes for another airing.

That the force makes mistakes, I don't for a moment question. It does, and some of them have been dillies. For these, it must be held accountable; to let any agent of the law go unchallenged in error would be to whittle at civil liberties considerably older than habeas corpus.

It is also true that the working Mountie of today has lost much in glamor.

His horse has been relegated to the musical ride. The scarlet tunic spends most of its time on a hanger. These days, the officer who pulls us in on most Canadian highways is no red-coated rider of the plains but a utilitarian traffic cop.

But though the trappings of the legend have all but vanished and the gallant band of pony-soldiers has expanded into a large, departmentalized and complex federal force, the substance of legend remains.

Your average Mountie is a better policeman than most. The fact that he's also human, hence fallible, doesn't diminish him in my eyes.

Much of the criticism levelled against the RCMP has stemmed from the activities of its undercover men. Anyone with even the sketchiest knowledge of intelligence service workings is aware that here the opportunities for error rise in swarms.

What surprises me isn't that mistakes occur—since not even Scotland Yard is without its blotched pages—but that they are sufficiently rare for each to become a cause celebre when exposed to public censure.

If you feel that Canada should know the name and nature of her enemies, think twice before damning the undercover activities of the RCMP. Our world has changed since the Mounties first rode west. Subversion is more subtle than it was when Louis Riel sprang his rebellion.

Here, let me confess to being a biased advocate. The horsemen, in the person of a Mountie who policed a little prairie town, came into my life at a time when I needed a friend badly.

My parents had gone out to the coast for a trial summer in a new pastorate. The family I was billeted with were stiff and stern. I was moping on a creek bridge outside the town, lonely as only a deserted six-year-old can be, when hoofs clip-clopped on the bridge planking.

He swung down with a creak and a jingle, that grand Mountie with the cavalry bow in his legs and the chest that bulged his bright tunic. In five minutes he had my situation well in hand.

I rode back to the town in splendor, high on the tall black horse and the envy of every kid who saw me. He fed me ice cream... rarest of treats to a church-mouse. The muddy stream under the bridge knew fish only when the suckers ran, but my Mountie bought me a bamboo pole, the kind the harvesters tipped with a lash to work their teams.

Few days passed without a fishless, but properly suspenseful, fishing junket. All through the summer, that young constable played substitute father to a lonely small boy.

So because of this and later encounters with the Mountie, include me out of any hate-RCMP campaign. It will take more than the Knott incident, stupid and unfortunate though it was, to reduce my respect for the horsemen.

RIP VAN TURTLE

Family turtle of uncertain years broke a nine-year vanishing act when workmen wrecked Cloverdale, home of ex-premier Simon Fraser Tolmie, this week. The hard-shelled creature was a pet of Mrs. John Tolmie, a later occupant, and was found by Richard Taylor, 651 Alpha, while cleaning up debris. Mrs. Taylor holds "Turtle", last noticed by neighbors of Cloverdale nine years ago.

Hotel Group Gives $4,000 To Bureau

Mayor R. B. Wilson today praised 14 hotels which pledged $4,000 to the Victoria Visitors Bureau.

The presentation was made by Victoria Hotel Association president Mrs. Norma Macdonald in the mayor's office.

She added the group had hopes of raising a little more later in the year and planned to make it an annual contribution to the bureau.

"It is our aim and ambition to assist in promoting one of the greatest assets we possess, tourism, for the benefit of our community," she told the mayor.

"This is a very fine example of helping ourselves," responded Mayor Wilson.

COUNCIL AWARE
He noted that city council, which annually votes $50,000 to the bureau, is "very aware of the importance of the tourist industry."

"This pledge is a wonderful expression of confidence by the hotel industry and it should set an example for the other business groups which benefit from tourism," he said.

Bureau manager William Hawkins said he hoped the new source of income from private enterprise would grow so that the bureau could improve and expand its promotional work.

Also present for the event were J. E. Neely and Nicholas Renard of the hotel association.

Shelbourne Sewer Lines Augumented

Saanich's sewerage system along Shelbourne Street is being prepared for more home-building activity in the area.

The addition of a third pump in the near future will meet the needs of the area for some years to come, says municipal engineer Neville Life.

The system already has two pumps considered adequate for housing which now exists.

Acquisition of the third pump on Garnet Road has been made possible by a federal loan of $2,967 made under the National Housing Act.

LOAN APPROVED

Approval of an NHA loan to Saanich was made from Ottawa Wednesday by John Garland, minister responsible for Central Mortgage and Housing Development.

"The loan will make the Garnet Road pumping system capable of serving an expanded area of development," Mr. Garland said.

The loan is for a term of 25 years with interest at 5% per cent per annum. Federal funds borrowed by Saanich for its overall plan of pollution control now total about $429,847.

Men Laid Off at VMD Over 65 When Hired

Victoria Labor Council agreed Wednesday to support a union's protest to a shipyard against compulsory retirement of two members at age 65.

Local 230, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers called the action by Victoria Machinery Depot a "dangerous precedent" in removing a man's livelihood arbitrarily when he has only a small pension forthcoming.

H. S. Hammill, VMD general manager, said today the two men were temporary employees hired after reaching 65, and in accordance with policy they were the first to go, in an anticipated layoff of 30 or 40 electricians.

He said these and other trades would be released as work on HMCS Assiniboine draws to a close in the next two or three weeks.

Mr. Hammill also denied the suggestion that the layoffs were based on any other reason.

"That is one of our rules," he said. "It is not adhered to entirely, but it fits into our pension scheme. A man may work longer on a year-to-year basis, but only if he is capable and a permanent employee. We'll hire anyone capable up to the age of 65."

He said it is hoped to dovetail the end of the Assiniboine conversion with the start of the next government job.

The council was told by one delegate that this type of company policy should be included in the collective agreement in order to guarantee a degree of protection to the union.

Secretary A. W. Toone said the only solution is for establishment of adequate, portable pensions, in accordance with Canadian Labor Congress policy.

A letter from the electricians' local said the two men discharged were both of good health and capable workmen. The union protested to the company, but so far has had no reply.

"We are greatly concerned that the company has arbitrary power to terminate a man's earning power," the letter said.

Delegate Robert Noble, machinists' union, said he is skeptical of the alleged "company policy" of retirement at 65.

"I worked there until I was 70 and they still call me back," he said.

E. T. Staley agreed there could be something more behind it. "It may be a means of removing good union men. I don't think there is any hard and fast rule," he said.

The council vice-president said there is recourse in provincial labor legislation making it possible to take a dismissal for unjust cause to arbitration.

He felt the dismissal of a capable man is unjust firing.

"I am certain the company is taking a swipe at somebody here..." Mr. Staley said.

Fred Bevis, a member of the electricians' local, said the electrical departments of VMD, Yarrow and HMC Dockyard are all affected in this way.

Harry Anderson, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway and Transport and General Workers, suggested "company policy" should be examined, that "it might be company policy that bald-headed men must retire..." that divorced men must go. You can get a lot of things under company policy...

These things should be spelled out in the collective agreement, he said.

Strike Threat At B.C. Ports

Supp Exams Don't Pay Off —Peterson

Hopes for a second look at the decision to halt supplementary Grade 12 university entrance examinations appeared dim today.

Latest group to add to a mounting protest was Victoria Labor Council which endorsed a resolution to go to Education Minister Leslie Peterson at its meeting Wednesday night.

But Mr. Peterson said the plain academic facts are that supplementals weren't paying off.

"It would seem illogical to go against the advice we have had, based on statistics," he said.

Of the 8,569 B.C. high school students who wrote "supps" last year only 712 graduated, Mr. Peterson disclosed.

"The university says that students who get in through supplementals are poor risks and they tend to fail in their next year," he added.

"It's hard to ignore these facts."

EYE SITUATION

However, he promised his department would "keep an eye" on the situation this year, and said the provincial board of examiners, which made the decision to cancel supps, would see "no hardship results."

The board decision was made after UBC Senate said the university would not accept students this year who had taken supplementals.

Victoria Labor Council followed its Vancouver counterpart in protesting the decision. Mr. Peterson has also received complaints from Parent-Teacher groups and Vancouver School Board.

The Labor council's education committee said that the ruling is unfair to thousands of high school students who have no intention of going to university, but who require Grade 12 to enter nursing, the armed forces or other vocations.

Mr. Peterson said that nurses may require a university entrance pass, but other vocations did not do so officially.

He said that university enrollment figures show that nearly all students who take the entrance exams attempt to enter university.

Longshoremen Ready To Enforce Demands

B.C.'s 4,500 longshoremen are ready to strike and paralyze the west coast shipping industry to back demands offsetting automation on the docks.

A SURPRISE IS WAITING FOR SOMEONE

James Van Somer, HMCS Skeena, appeared in city police court this morning on an impaired driving charge, and was remanded to June 30 for judgment.

He probably won't make it. Not because he's going to jump bail, but because June 30 is a Sunday, and court does not sit on Sundays.

Magistrate William Ostler heard prosecution and defence cases this morning, and said he would want some time to prepare his judgment.

He suggested a week's adjournment, but was informed that Van Somer will be at sea until June 28.

The magistrate then set June 30 for judgment and left the court before officials could point out the error.

Mayor Urges Daff Festival For Victoria

Mayor R. B. Wilson today proposed a "Daffodil Festival" on a par with the famous Ottawa tulip festival—as a Greater Victoria effort to extend the tourist season.

His idea will be taken up with the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association along with the association's suggestion for an autumn talent show.

It would bring contestants here from all over Vancouver Island and the lower mainland, it is envisaged.

"Our daffodils create a tremendous impression every year when they are taken back east on goodwill tours," Mayor Wilson told finance committee.

"Who don't we have a Daffodil Festival here to help extend the tourist season?"

Committee recommended the four-acre Mountain View property be subdivided into four parcels and each put on the market as an apartment site.

Purchase of a $4,700 special tape recording machine to replace a court stenographer in the police court was recommended after city manager C. C. Wyatt said the present sten is leaving and would be difficult to replace. A report said Vancouver has found it saves an average of $1,200 annually in court operating costs.

Longshoremen contend the operators realize a greater profit through automation as they are able to load and discharge ships faster, making more ports in a shorter time.

WANT PROTECTION
"We are not opposed to machines, but we want protection to go along with them," Mr. Bell said.

West Coast American longshoremen have pledged their support to a B.C. strike, and would strike also, if necessary, he said.

He said wage parity—hourly rates range from $2.94 to $3.14—is a small issue compared with job security.

The members are ready to resume negotiations anytime after 8 a.m. Sunday.

About 150 of the 700 Vancouver Island members of International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union belong to Victoria Local 504, business agent Stan Ball said today.

"Nobody in the industry wants a strike for the sake of a strike," said Mr. Ball, who is also one of a four-man West Coast negotiating committee.

"But we are willing to go to strike to achieve our objective and protect our jobs."

NO CONTRACT

The Shipping Federation of B.C. (employers of longshoremen) have stalled and stalled—we've been 11 months without a contract—but we'll get our objective eventually."

Members of a dozen B.C. locals of the union will be asked Wednesday to authorize the calling of a strike, following failure of a federal conciliation board to resolve the dispute involving Vancouver, New Westminster, Victoria, Chemsalms, Port Alberni and Nanaimo directly.

A strike legally could take place as early as Tuesday, or seven days after Federal Labor Minister Allan MacEachen received the conciliation report. It was not clear exactly when he got the report, however.

NO THIRD PARTY

Conciliation recommended immediate resumption of negotiations, declaring futility of settlement via a third party.

The board recommended that longshoremen, Shipping Federation and Wharf Operators' Association get together to try to negotiate parallel agreements, at the same time, same place.

Union aim is a master contract in the industry and protection against mechanization and modernization, as longshoremen in west coast U.S. ports, Hawaii and Alaska have obtained.

This plan calls for a five-year joint trust fund based upon wages of men displaced by machinery and located in other jobs. The fund would be used for pensions or early retirement payments.

Longshoremen contend the operators realize a greater profit through automation as they are able to load and discharge ships faster, making more ports in a shorter time.

"We are not opposed to machines, but we want protection to go along with them," Mr. Bell said.

Ask The Times

Q. To settle a bridge argument: Both sides vulnerable, game apiece, one side scored their two games after the other and claimed because games were scored together they were entitled to 700 for the rubber. I know better, but I cannot convince our opponents that they were only entitled to 500 for the rubber because we also had a game. R.H.E.

A. You are quite correct.

Q. Is Canada still exporting as much uranium to the U.S. as she has done in the past? M.L.

A. No. Since Canada sold a maximum of 15,000 tons of uranium oxide in 1959 to the U.S., deliveries have since fallen steadily; this fall reflects the fall in demand from Canada's main customer. However, uranium continues to play an important role in the Canadian economy and is high on the list of export commodities.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Elected By Popular Vote!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm no kid (33) and have had enough experience in this line to know better, but I am in a jam. I started seeing a young woman (she is 25) and we hit it off fine. You know, Abby, when the lights are low a guy makes a lot of "campaign promises," and I guess I did tell her we'd be married in the future. Well, what does this dizzy dame do but go out and buy herself an "engagement ring." She took it to the office where we both work and announced our "engagement." She's telling everybody we'd be married around Thanksgiving. We did talk about it, but I wasn't that definite. I really don't want to marry her or anybody else at the moment. What do I do now?

IN A JAM
DEAR IN: A man who makes "campaign promises" is definitely a candidate. So prepare yourself to "run" in one direction or another.

DEAR ABBY: For crying in one direction or another, if you use this letter, don't use my name or I'll never hear the end of it. I am a man almost 40. I sell for a living and do very well because I'm a good talker. I use the telephone instead of writing because, believe it or not, I can't spell. I have tried to look up words in the dictionary to see how they are spelled, but how can you find a word in the dictionary if you can't spell it?

NO SIGNATURE
DEAR NO SIGNATURE: Look up the word the way you THINK it should be spelled. If you can't find it, look up a synonym (a word which means the same thing)—and you'll probably run into it. If you don't have any luck—just call up somebody and ask him! P.S. Start with "dictionary."

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl who is almost 12 years old and my mother never told me the "facts of life." How can I get her to tell me soon? If she finds out I already know, she will kill me.

SHOULD KNOW
DEAR SHOULD: Come right out and tell your mother exactly what you know. This will give her an opportunity to correct any wrong information you have received, and to answer any questions you would like to ask her. If you are a normal young lady, you will probably have several.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANDY:
"What it costs to maintain one vice would bring up two children." (Franklin)

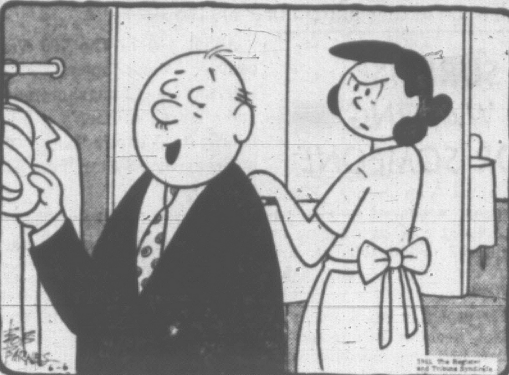

For a personal, unpublished answer to your letter, write to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Don't put off writing letters. Send one dollar to Abby for her booklet, "How To Write Letters For All Occasions."

SHOPPING GUIDE

Make Rainy Days Active By Decorating the House

By PENNY SAVER

The advent of rain this week put Penny into an inside mood. If you have to stay out of the rain, you might as well do something constructive—particularly if you let spring cleaning time pass by.

Store where I looked for inspiration has white interior latex paint selling for $2.50 a gallon. It covers well and is ideal for women because it will wash out of brushes and off skin with soap and water.

Strictly for the hallways, living room or dining room (you'll have to look elsewhere for paint for the kitchen and bathroom), store will mix it in any color you wish, charging you just the 65-cent cost for tube of tint and keeping the messy mixing out of your home.

If your eye isn't too straight when you're wielding a paint brush, better get in a stock of masking tape to cover up parts you don't want painted. Be economical, though, and get it in bulk. It may not have a fancy box, but it's much cheaper without. Sixty-yard roll of 1/4-inch wide tape is $1.15.

To go with the new paint job, how about bamboo drapes lacquered to match or contrast? Plain bamboo is 20 cents a square foot. In shades of green, yellow, brown, red, blue, it is 30 cents a square foot. Track to hang it on is 40 cents a foot, although if you have a slide track for drapes already, it will do. Otherwise, store owner will hang track and curtains for you, at no extra charge.

Best thing about these is that they can be cleaned with the vacuum cleaner and will last for years. If you change your decor again, they can be re-lacquered to complement the new colors.

If you have energy to spare, call Penny at 382-3131 for names of stores where items may be obtained.

Floor-length gown of white nylon, highlighted with lace appliques, was choice of Miss Joyce Ellen Thickett when she exchanged vows with Robert Ronald Krueger in a recent ceremony in St. Matthew's Anglican Church.

The full skirted gown featured a scooped neckline trimmed with lace, and a coronet of seed pearls and rhinestones held her veil. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Thickett, 2845 Bryn Mawr Road, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Krueger, 328 Goldstream Avenue.

Rev. A. D. Hatfield officiated at the ceremony.

Maid of honor, Miss Sandra Hett, and bridesmatron, Mrs. F. Richmond, wore white gowns with gold floral design and turquoise net overskirts. They carried bouquets of white carnations and yellow roses.

Mike Ullock was best man, and Ian Francis, usher.

White snowball blossoms and red roses decorated tables at the reception held in the home of the bride's parents. John Hayton proposed the toast.

On return the newlyweds will make their home at 328 Goldstream Avenue.

Premature Birth After Auto Crash

VANCOUVER (CP)—One of 19 persons injured Monday when a car rammed through a race-track fence has given birth to a baby boy.

Mrs. A. W. Bates of Delta, and her four-pound 1/2-ounce son were in fair condition. Hospital officials said her accident injuries cannot be treated for several days. The baby was one month premature and was placed in an incubator for observation.

The accident occurred at Ladner Park when a car went out of control and crashed through a barrier, and fence, then plowed through a crowd of fans. One was killed.

Still in serious condition was Alexander Allen of Richmond. Mrs. Pauline Trafton of North Surrey, was in only fair condition. Ten others remain in satisfactory or good condition.

The occupant of the car, the wife of Sen. S. S. McKeen, was in satisfactory condition.

'We Want String Trio' Labor Cries

Organized labor Wednesday added its voice to the clamor to have the Empress Hotel tea time trio restored and canned music thrown out.

According to a report by Mrs. Rhoda Erickson, delegate to Victoria Labor Council for the hotel employees' union — Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers — manager Leslie Parkinson has had a "deluge" of protest over termination of the long-time musical fixture.

In addition, there has been direct approach to CPR president N. R. Crump in Montreal to have the string trio reinstated, Mrs. Erickson said.

When the trio left, the hotel installed loudspeakers to relay recorded music to the lounge, where for 36 1/2 years at least, there had been "live" music.

Famed Billy Tickle and his orchestra filled the role 3 1/2 years until he retired in 1960. The labor council endorses the feeling that the city's largest best-known hotel should retain this charming feature in the face of steady changes in the "dowager" hotel.

MINISTER GETS PRAISE 'DESPITE SOCRED TIES'

The man who bears the brunt of union bitterness at "unfair" provincial labor legislation was a target Wednesday of unexpected union hosannas.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson was praised by Mrs. Rhoda Erickson, chairman of Local 276 Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, whose 300 members are employed at the Empress Hotel.

Mr. Peterson was credited two weeks ago with averting a hotel strike at the 11th hour, getting the parties to agree to arbitration.

She told Victoria Labor Council Mr. Peterson deserved great credit for the way he handled the situation, "even if he is a Social Creditor."

"It is hard to understand how a man so capable and deserving of praise should be one of the perpetrators of Bills 42 and 43," Mrs. Erickson said.

Chimps, High Flyer To Star in Circus

Trained chimpanzees and a shapely aerialist will be among the stars of the Shrine Circus coming to Memorial Arena Tuesday and Wednesday.

The chimps are no strangers to TV fans who watch International Showtime Friday nights. Under the guidance of trainer Kurt Jensen they will ride scooters, juggle and imitate humans at their own tea party.

Miss Lydia, a beauty from Hamm, Germany, will appear for the first time in Canada to defy danger in the air.

Tickets for all performances are on sale at the Arena box office or from members of Victoria Shrine Club.

Accountants Meeting At Harrison Resort

The spring council meeting of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants is being held at Harrison Hot Springs today, Friday and Saturday.

The Canadian Institute is made up from the provincial institutes, and two or more representatives from each province will attend. The British Columbia Institute will be represented by its president, W. Gordon Holmes of Victoria and by its first vice-president, J. B. Ewing of Vancouver.

MEANS TO AN END

'Pop' Discs Bring Profits

OTTAWA (CP)—A Montreal broadcaster said Wednesday his French-language radio station got on its feet economically by almost constant programming of the top 50 "pop" records on the American hit parade. Said Raymond Crepault, president of CJMS Radio Montreal Limitee:

"As a French-Canadian I deplored this, but it gave us a breathing space."

Mr. Renault, who took over management of the then near-bankrupt station in 1958, was appearing before the Board of Broadcast Governors in support of an application for a power increase to 50,000 watts from the present 10,000-watt day-time and 5,000-watt night-time output.

He told the board, however, that since then CJMS had achieved a distinguished record of public service through its news, cultural, sports and other programs and American hit parade records now formed only about 20 per cent of records broadcast.

The question of "hit parade" English-language records arose when BBG counsel William Pearson said a recent BBG survey had shown that CJMS still played considerably more records of this kind than other French-language stations in Montreal.

500 Victimized By Pickpockets

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Police said today that some of the vast throng that filed through St. Peter's Basilica before the body of the Pope were not there just to mourn. Five hundred persons reported their pockets picked in the crowd, police said.

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (Reuters)—Unconfirmed reports reaching here today said two whites were killed and three wounded in fighting in the Katanga copper mining town of Kolwezi this week. ## BURIED IN ST. PETER'S

Fear of War Haunted Pope

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—Pope John XXIII, the 261st pontiff, was laid to rest in the crypt of St. Peter's Basilica tonight, a few yards from the remains of St. Peter, the first pope.

The Pope's body was carried from the basilica itself and through the door of St. Martha down to the crypts below where his predecessors lie after the cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church paid their final homage to the pontiff.

As the Pope had requested, only a few persons accompanied the coffin to the crypt—his peasant relatives, six cardinals and several canons of St. Peter's.

The coffin will be moved once again—to the palace of St. John Lateran next to the basilica being converted on the late pontiff's orders into the headquarters of the diocese of Rome.

The Pope—who was also Archbishop of Rome—asked in his final testament, made public today, that the palace be his final resting place.

Earlier, a tide of humanity, perhaps 2,000,000 strong, paid homage to the Pope, who dedicated his life to a fight for peace and died fearing war.

As the mourners moved through the great basilica, prelates said masses at altars around the body.

Msgr. Loris Capovilla, the Pope's personal secretary, said one of the masses and then told the mourners that Pope John had said on his deathbed: "I am afraid. I am afraid."

I fear that my children might become involved in a new war." As the lights of the fountain in St. Peter's Square went out and the grey dawn broke over the hills of Rome, the lines of mourners making their way into the great basilica swelled to an unbroken stream.

At 10:30 a.m. the police officer in charge said 1,000,000 people—including many pilgrims from Canada—had paid last respects to the man who has been called the greatest Pope since Gregory the Great.

Those there this morning included Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger of Montreal and Italian Prime Minister-Designate Aldo Moro.

The basilica, where the Pope will be buried, remained open all night to allow as many people as possible to see the Pope.

Workmen throughout Italy stopped work for 10 minutes at 10 a.m. in mourning.

Pearson Briefed
OTTAWA (UPI)—Livingston Merchant, President Kennedy's special NATO multilateral force negotiator, today gave Prime Minister Pearson a 90-minute briefing on U.S. proposals for the sea-borne multilateral NATO nuclear force. "It was a very impressive briefing," Pearson said.

THE CRISIS IN QUEBEC

Rural Areas and Cities Both Have Grievances

(This is the third article in a series on Quebec's position within confederation. The author, S. Peter Regenstreif, has studied the Canadian political scene so intensely that he was able to forecast the last federal election results with a high degree of accuracy.)

The Revolution of Rising Expectations.
The present era has been characterized in such terms by many observers and there is no doubt that, of all the regions of Canada, Quebec is the one which is most firmly in its grip.

The revolution takes many forms and it has permanently changed the structure of Quebec politics. It has brought a progressive and dynamic government to power in Quebec city. It has also been responsible for the appearance of two forces which are essentially outside the routine confines of the established party system: Social Credit and the Separatist movement.

These remarkable political developments have their roots in rapid industrialization, explosive urbanization and increased communications, particularly in the use of television. These have all come together, to impose different needs and to arouse new aspirations.

and a historic cleavage between French and English that now seems to be intensifying with each passing day.

The two novel political movements which have emerged in the past few years in Quebec, Social Credit and Separatism, gain their support from the opposite ends of the French-Canadian social spectrum and from different parts of the province.

What support the Separatists have is among some metropolitan (that is, Montreal and Quebec city) professionals, students and intellectuals. On

Tories Shaken By Scandals

(Times News Services)

LONDON—Prime Minister Macmillan's government was rocked today by its biggest scandal with the admission of its war minister that he stood up in the House of Commons and lied about his relationship with a red-haired London playgirl.

"What the hell is going on in this country?" asked the Daily Mirror, Britain's largest newspaper, in the wake of the resignation Wednesday by John Profumo from his post as war minister.

The political explosion resulting from Profumo's admission, threatened to crumble the Macmillan government which had been expected to call new elections, possibly this fall.

The Opposition Labor Party did not rush to the attack against the Conservatives as a result of the Profumo affair. Instead, Labor party leader Harold Wilson, on his return today from Canada, said only that the party might seek an inquiry into the security aspects of the case.

Britain's newspaper gave the Profumo case the full treatment today.

"The scandal is one of the worst to wrack British public life for many years," the Daily Mail said.

Among the scandals that may be held against Macmillan's Conservatives when the election comes are these:

• The conviction of homosexual admiralty clerk William Vassall of espionage and the weaknesses in security it disclosed.

• The conviction of a former junior minister, Sir Ian Horbin, for homosexual acts.

• The conviction of shadowy intelligence agent George Blake for being a double agent who betrayed British secrets to the Soviets.

• The conviction of a spy ring led by Russian-born Gordon Longdale and including civil service employees of the British admiralty, who sold

Court Ousts Hysterical Christine

LONDON (Reuters)—Model Christine Keeler was ordered out of the courtroom and dissolved in hysterics today during the trial of the Negro singer she has accused of assaulting her.

The red-haired beauty, whose affair with war minister John Profumo caused his resignation Wednesday in a scandal that rocked the nation, was taken from the court when she shouted "Why don't you shut him up" as the singer testified in the prisoner's box.

Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon said "regardless of all those things she has caused me, I have loved her with all my heart."

Miss Keeler, 21, says Gordon, 31, her onetime lover, attacked her outside her apartment—punching her, and kicking her in the chest.

Gordon startled the court when he said he wanted to subpoena osteopath Dr. Stephen Ward, who has been linked with the model and with Profumo. He said Christine told him she had known Ward since she went to live with him when she was about 14 and had been working as a call girl since she was 17.

He said he met Christine about two years ago in a London restaurant.

The model denied Wednesday that she had been expecting Gordon's baby when she disappeared before a trial at which she was the star witness and went to Spain.

Out of Hospital

RESTING AT Rouyn, Quebec, is French deputy national leader Real Caouette after two weeks' hospital stay. He suffered fainting spells in his office. Party officials said he would relax "for another month or two." A diabetic, Caouette also had a kidney ailment which may mean a late summer operation, a spokesman said. But he is expected in the Commons in late June.

FEDERAL BUDGET JUNE 13

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal budget will be presented in the Commons Thursday, June 13, Finance Minister Gordon announced today.

Two Hour Span New Challenge

By ROGER LANE

NEW YORK (AP)—The finish line is a long way off in the international race for a commercial air transport that will whiz across the Atlantic in two or three hours.

But the U.S. officially is in the running, following President Kennedy's declaration Wednesday that the government will subsidize the building of supersonic air transport.

The president's disclosure came less than 24 hours after Pan American World Airways ordered six of the supersonic planes that Britain and France are preparing to produce jointly.

London and Paris officials viewed it as a strategic boost to their drive to challenge U.S. superiority in the commercial aircraft field.

In turn, word of the Kennedy decision was cheered by plane builders in the United States, and by Trans World Airlines, Pan AM's chief U.S. competitor on overseas routes.

The thing most at stake is prestige, particularly for the United States which long has built the bulk of the world's passenger planes.

Also involved is the ticklish balance of international payments problem that vitally affects the U.S. economy. Sales of U.S. planes and supporting equipment abroad have contributed materially to the country's favorable balance in international trade.

The U.S. is expected to shoot for a plane that will fly 2,000 miles an hour or faster—more than three times the speed of sound.

Costs have been estimated at $1,000,000,000 upwards, and Kennedy said, will require government subsidy.

The projected British-French "Concorde" aims at roughly 1,500 miles an hour. The two European nations have pooled $500,000,000 for their effort.

QUESTION DATES

Kennedy talked of getting the American model into service by 1969 or before, although some experts believe 1971 or 1972 is

Treaty Talks Open

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—Japan called today for a new agreement with Canada and the United States on sharing of the high seas fisheries of the north Pacific but the U.S. warned that scrapping of the present 10-year conservation pact may cause great friction among the three countries.

Both Canada and the U.S. have unparalleled investments in the conservation of salmon, halibut and other north Pacific fisheries. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall said in opening a conference dealing with Japanese complaints. Any agreement which did not take this U.S.-Canada contribution into consideration would not long endure, he said.

Both Udall and Canadian Fisheries Minister H. J. Robichaud urged the Japanese to allow the existing conservation convention to continue and to seek changes and modifications in it, rather than to try to work out a new convention.

The existing agreement, under which the Japanese agree to abstain from fishing for salmon, halibut and herring in certain areas of the north Pacific on the North American side, lapses June 12 if it is not reaffirmed. Any country can thereafter give one year's notice for terminating the pact.

Canadian officials fear that indiscriminate fishing by an expanding Japanese fleet could wreck the Canadian salmon industry.

WANTS NEW CONVENTION

But Masayoshi Ito, Japan's deputy minister of agriculture, said a new convention should be worked out. The Japanese want to do away with the fishing abstention principle altogether and work out some other form of conservation program.

Japanese are allowed to fish for groundfish but this is hampered by the fact that Japan agreed to abstain from catching halibut in certain areas where groundfish are mixed with halibut.

"Further, the large-scale expansion of fishery of a fourth country into the north Pacific

LOCH NESS VIGIL

Monster Watcher Hopeful

LONDON (AP)—Richard Need is a man with an unusual pastime—monster watching.

Each year this 31-year-old documentary film maker drives the 550 miles from London to Loch Ness in northern Scotland to watch and wait and film a monster, if one should ever show itself.

"At one time I felt there was something in the loch, but was not quite sure what," he said.

"Now, after reading all the books and articles and speaking to several eyewitnesses, I am prepared to stick my neck out and say that the animal in Loch Ness is as yet unclassified by zoology, that it is probably 30 or 40 feet long and that it probably resembles a plesiosaur (a prehistoric monster)."

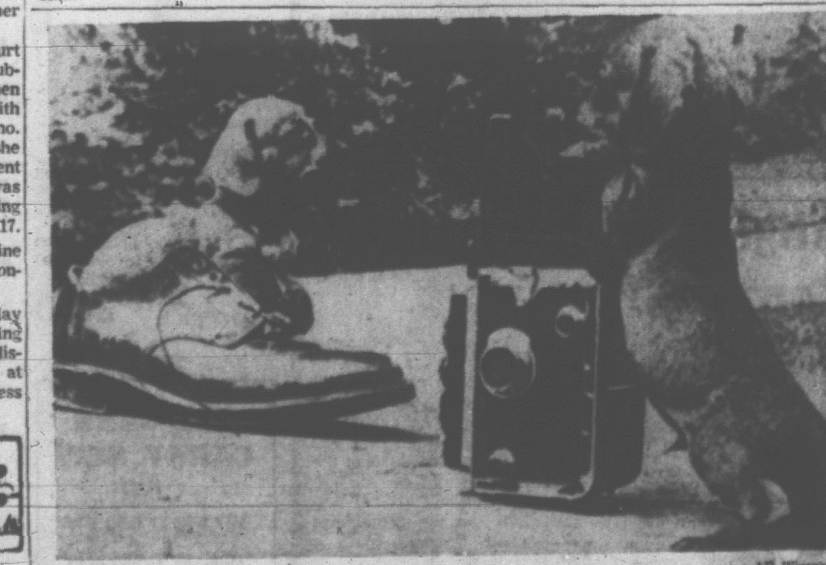

Need has never seen a monster, but he's still hoping.

He doesn't think monster-watching will catch on as a sport.

"The rewards are so non-existent. It gets boring by about the fourth day. You need to be half mad to stick it out. I have now been going to the loch for three consecutive years and I still don't expect to see anything for some time. It's hardly an exciting sport."

Need's wife, Jayne, thinks it's a fairly harmless form of lunacy. She calls his pastime "monstering."

Come On, Smile
Seven-week-old dachshund, Long-fellow, right, seems to be experiencing trouble getting his brother, Hot Dog, to break out with happy look for camera. Lynchburg, Va., owners reported that after several attempts he gave up and joined his brother in well-earned dog nap.

Tobacco Shares Hit By Court Ruling

Reacting to a Florida court ruling that a tobacco company can be held liable for damages for a death caused by cigarette smoking, tobacco shares declined sharply in trading today on Wall Street.

Philip Morris was off about 3, Liggett and Myers 2, Lorillard more than a point and Reynolds a point.

Industrials were down in light trading on the Toronto stock market.

AT TORONTO Noranda led declining mines, falling 1/2, and Denison eased 1/4. Senior western oils were dull and showed few changes. Among penny issues, Southern Union

AT NEW YORK among Canadian issues, Aluminum Ltd., Canadian Pacific and Hudson Bay Mining all were off 1/4. Distillers Seagrams was up 1/4.

American Stock Exchange prices were mixed in moderate trading. Shawinigan advanced 1/4 and Fargo Oil slipped 1/16. Other Canadian issues were either unchanged or unsold.

AT MONTREAL prices continued lower on the stock exchange today. Trading was fairly active in industrials, but still slow in mines and golds.

CHAN-TV Asks BBG Approval On Switch

The Board of Broadcast Governors is being asked to approve a complex shift of shares in Vancouver's CHAN-TV, president Ray Peters said today.

He said reports from Ottawa that the deal involved purchase of Victoria's CHEK-TV and also involved radio station CKNW of New Westminster were "completely and utterly erroneous."

"Somehow our representation to the BBG was reported all wrong," said Mr. Peters, head of Vantel Broadcasting Ltd. which owns CHAN.

Neither CHEK nor CKNW is involved, although some of the shareholders are personally, he said.

Mr. Peters said Vantel is applying for a transfer of shares from "four or five" holders, including Denis Hagar of Victoria.

All but "a small portion" will be picked up by other Vantel shareholders, he said.

This portion will be sold to Frank Griffiths of CKNW as a personal investment.

"He will not be a director and it will be strictly a minority interest," he added.

Mr. Griffiths does want to buy the Victoria TV station, but the BBG turned him down last March.

Mr. Peters said CHAN had also attempted to negotiate a sale with CHEK president David Armstrong, but they could not come to terms.

Three Oil Firms Complete Merger

CALGARY (CP)—The merger of Phillips Oil Company, Calalta Petroleum Ltd. and Plains Petroleum Ltd. has been consummated here.

A. G. Donaldson, president of the three independent companies prior to their amalgamation, said they will exist under the name of Plains Petroleum Ltd.

Arthur Mayse

In recent years I have observed the growth of a new Canadian sport which I like not at all. This game resembles soccer, except that for a football you substitute the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Maclean's magazine put the game in the big time with a denigrating article this spring.

B.C. Highways Minister Gagliardi, smarting from RCMP tokens received while testing his theory that speed isn't the killer, has clobbered the horsemen time and again in utterances of remarkably un-ministerial calibre.

Now comes the Knott affair, a sequence of blunders for which heads should roll, and for weeks hereafter, 'Mountie' is going to be one degree removed from a dirty word.

This I regret. It distresses me to see one of Canada's proudest traditions dunked in the mud, and to listen while apocryphal tales of RCMP stupidity, brutality and arrogance are trotted out of their hidey-holes for another airing.

That the force makes mistakes, I don't for a moment question. It does, and some of them have been dillies. For these, it must be held accountable; to let any agent of the law go unchallenged in error would be to whittle at civil liberties considerably older than habeas corpus.

It is also true that the working Mountie of today has lost much in glamor.

His horse has been relegated to the musical ride. The scarlet tunic spends most of its time on a hanger. These days, the officer who pulls us in on most Canadian highways is no red-coated rider of the plains but a utilitarian traffic cop. But though the trappings of the legend have all but vanished and the gallant band of pony-soldiers has expanded into a large, departmentalized and complex federal force, the substance of legend remains.

Your average Mountie is a better policeman than most. The fact that he's also human, hence fallible, doesn't diminish him in my eyes.

Much of the criticism levelled against the RCMP has stemmed from the activities of its undercover men. Anyone with even the sketchiest knowledge of intelligence service workings is aware that here the opportunities for error rise in swarms.

What surprises me isn't that mistakes occur—since not even Scotland Yard is without its blotched pages—but that they are sufficiently rare for each to become a cause celebre when exposed to public censure.

If you feel that Canada should know the name and nature of her enemies, think twice before damning the undercover activities of the RCMP. Our world has changed since the Mounties first rode west. Subversion is more subtle than it was when Louis Riel sprang his rebellion.

Here, let me confess to being a biased advocate. The horsemen, in the person of a Mountie who policed a little prairie town, came into my life at a time when I needed a friend badly.

My parents had gone out to the coast for a trial summer in a new pastorate. The family I was billeted with were stiff and stern. I was moping on a creek bridge outside the town, lonely as only a "deserted six-year-old" can be, when hoofbeats clip-copped on the bridge planking.

He swung down with a creek and a jingle, that grand big Mountie with the cavalry bow in his legs and the chest that bulged his bright tunic. In five minutes he had my situation well in hand.

I rode back to the town in splendor, high on the tall black horse and the envy of every kid who saw me. He fed me ice cream... rarest of treats to a church-mouse. The muddy stream under the bridge knew fish only when the suckers ran, but my Mountie bought me a bamboo pole, the kind the harvesters tipped with a lash to work their teams.

Few days passed without a fishless, but properly suspenseful, fishing bucket. All through the summer, that young constable played substitute father to a lonely small boy.

So because of this and later encounters with the Mounted, include me out of any hate-the-RCMP campaign. It will take more than the Knott incident, stupid and unfortunate though it was, to reduce my respect for the horsemen.

RIP VAN TURTLE

Family turtle of uncertain years broke a nine-year vanishing act when workmen wrecked Cloverdale, home of ex-premier Simon Fraser Tolmie, this week. The hard-shelled creature was a pet of Mrs. John Tolmie, a later occupant, and was found by Richard Taylor, 651 Alpha, while cleaning up debris. Mrs. Taylor holds "Turtle", last noticed by neighbors of Cloverdale nine years ago.

Hotel Group Gives $4,000 To Bureau

Mayor R. B. Wilson today praised 14 hotels which pledged $4,000 to the Victoria Visitors Bureau.

The presentation was made by Victoria Hotel Association president Mrs. Norma Macdonald in the mayor's office.

She added the group had hopes of raising a little more later in the year and planned to make it an annual contribution to the bureau.

"It is our aim and ambition to assist in promoting one of the greatest assets we possess, tourism, for the benefit of our community," she told the mayor.

"This is a very fine example of helping ourselves," responded Mayor Wilson.

COUNCIL AWARE
He noted that city council, which annually votes $50,000 to the bureau, is "very aware of the importance of the tourist industry."

"This pledge is a wonderful expression of confidence by the hotel industry and it should set an example for the other business groups which benefit from tourism," he said.

Bureau manager William Hawkins said he hoped the new source of income from private enterprise would grow so that the bureau could improve and expand its promotional work.

Also present for the event were J. E. Neely and Nicholas Renard of the hotel association.

Shelbourne Sewer Lines Augmented

Saanich's sewerage system along Shelbourne Street is being prepared for more home-building activity in the area.

The addition of a third pump in the near future will meet the needs of the area for some years to come, says municipal engineer Neville Life.

The system already has two pumps considered adequate for housing which now exists.

Acquisition of the third pump on Garnet Road has been made possible by a federal loan of $2,967 made under the National Housing Act.

LOAN APPROVED
Approval of an NHA loan to Saanich was made from Ottawa Wednesday by John Garland, minister responsible for Central Mortgage and Housing Development.

The loan will make the Garnet Road pumping system capable of serving an expanded area of development, Mr. Garland said.

The loan is for a term of 25 years with interest at 5% per cent per annum. Federal funds borrowed by Saanich for its overall plan of pollution control now total about $429,847.

Men Laid Off at VMD Over 65 When Hired

Victoria Labor Council agreed Wednesday to support a union's protest to a shipyard against compulsory retirement of two members at age 65.

Local 230, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers called the action by Victoria Machinery Depot a "dangerous precedent" in removing a man's livelihood arbitrarily when he has only a small pension forthcoming.

H. S. Hammill, VMD general manager, said today the two men were temporary employees hired after reaching 65, and in accordance with policy they were the first to be laid off out of an anticipated 30 or 40 electricians.

He said these and other trades would be released as work on HMCS Assiniboine draws to a close in the next two or three weeks.

Mr. Hammill also denied the suggestion that the layoffs were based on any other reason.

"That is one of our rules," he said. "It is not adhered to entirely, but it fits into my pension scheme. A man may work longer on a year-to-year basis, but only if he is capable and a permanent employee. We'll hire anyone capable up to the age of 65."

He said it is hoped to do the end of the Assiniboine conversion with the start of the next government job.

The council was told by one delegate that this type of company policy should be included in the collective agreement in order to guarantee a degree of protection to the union.

Secretary A. W. Toone said the only solution is for establishment of adequate, portable pensions, in accordance with Canadian Labor Congress policy.

A letter from the electrical union's local said the two men discharged were both of good health and capable workmen. The union protested to the company, but so far has had no reply.

"We are greatly concerned that the company has arbitrary power to terminate a man's earning power," the letter said.

Delegate Robert Noble, machinists' union, said he is skeptical of the alleged "company policy" of retirement at 65.

"I worked there until I was 70 and they still call me back," he said.

E. T. Staley agreed there could be something more behind it. "It may be a means of removing good union men. I don't think there is any hard and fast rule," he said.

The council vice-president said there is recourse in provincial labor legislation making it possible to take a dismissal for unjust cause to arbitration.

He felt the dismissal of a capable man is unjust firing. "I am certain the company is taking a swipe at somebody here..." Mr. Staley said.

Fred Bevis, a member of the electricians' local, said the electrical departments of VMD, Yarrows and HMC Dockyard are all effected in this way.

Harry Anderson, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway and Transport and General Workers, suggested "company policy" should be examined, that "it might be company policy that bald-headed men must retire..." that divorced men must go. You can get a lot of things under company policy...

These things should be spelled out in the collective agreement, he said.

Strike Threat At B.C. Ports

Supp Exams Don't Pay Off —Peterson

Hopes for a second look at the decision to halt supplementary Grade 12 university entrance examinations appeared dim today.

Latest group to add to a mounting protest was Victoria Labor Council which endorsed a resolution to go to Education Minister Leslie Peterson at its meeting Wednesday night.

But Mr. Peterson said the plain academic facts are that supplementals weren't paying off.

"It would seem illogical to go against the advice we have had, based on statistics," he said.

Of the 8,569 B.C. high school students who wrote "supps" last year only 712 graduated, Mr. Peterson disclosed.

"The university says that students who get in through supplementals are poor risks and they tend to fail in their next year," he added.

"It's hard to ignore these facts."

However, he promised his department would "keep an eye" on the situation this year and said the provincial board of examiners, which made the decision to cancel supps, would see "no hardship results."

The board decision was made after UBC Senate said the university would not accept students this year who had taken supplementals.

Victoria Labor Council followed its Vancouver counterpart in protesting the decision. Mr. Peterson has also received complaints from Parent-Teacher groups and Vancouver School Board.

The labor council's education committee said that the ruling is unfair to thousands of high school students who have no intention of going to university, but who require Grade 12 to enter nursing, the armed forces or other vocations.

Mr. Peterson said that nurses may require a university entrance pass, but other vocations did not do so officially.

He said that university enrollment figures show that nearly all students who take the entrance exams attempt to enter university.

Longshoremen Ready To Enforce Demands

B.C.'s 4,500 longshoremen are ready to strike and paralyze the west coast shipping industry to back demands offsetting automation on the docks.

A SURPRISE IS WAITING FOR SOMEONE

James Van Somer, HMCS Skeena, appeared in city police court this morning on an impaired driving charge, and was remanded to June 30 for judgment.

He probably won't make it. Not because he's going to jump bail, but because June 30 is a Sunday, and court does not sit on Sundays.

Magistrate William Ostler heard prosecution and defence cases this morning, and said he would want some time to prepare his judgment.

He suggested a week's adjournment, but was informed that Van Somers will be at sea until June 28.

The magistrate then set June 30 for judgment and left the court before officials could point out the error.

FINANCE NOTES

Mayor Urges Daff Festival For Victoria

Mayor R. B. Wilson today proposed a "Daffodil Festival" on a par with the famous Ottawa tulip festival—as a Greater Victoria effort to extend the tourist season.

His idea will be taken up with the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association along with the association's suggestion for an autumn talent show.

It would bring contestants here from all over Vancouver Island and the lower mainland, it is envisaged.

"Our daffodils create a tremendous impression every year when they are taken back east on goodwill tours," Mayor Wilson told finance committee.

"Who doesn't we have a Daffodil Festival here to help extend the tourist season?"

Committee recommended the four-acre Mountain View property be subdivided into four parcels and each put on the market as an apartment site.

Purchase of a $4,700 special tape recording machine to replace a court stenographer in the police court was recommended after city manager C. C. Wyatt said the present steno is leaving and would be difficult to replace. A report said Vancouver has found it saves an average of $1,200 annually in court operating costs.

About 150 of the 700 Vancouver Island members of International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union belong to Victoria Local 504, business agent Stan Ball said today.

"Nobody in the industry wants a strike for the sake of a strike," said Mr. Ball, who is also one of a four-man West Coast negotiating committee.

"But we are willing to go to strike to achieve our objective and protect our jobs."

NO CONTRACT

"The Shipping Federation of B.C. (employers of longshoremen) have stalled and stalled—we've been 11 months without a contract—but we'll get our objective eventually."

Members of a dozen B.C. locals of the union will be asked Wednesday to authorize the calling of a strike, following failure of a federal conciliation board to resolve the dispute involving Vancouver, New Westminster, Victoria, Chemainus, Port Alberni and Nanaimo directly.

A strike legally could take place as early as Tuesday, or seven days after Labor Minister Allan MacEachen received the conciliation report. It was not clear exactly when he got the report, however.

NO THIRD PARTY

Conciliation recommended immediate resumption of negotiations, declaring futility of settlement via a third party.

The board recommended that longshoremen, Shipping Federation and Wharf Operators' Association get together to try to negotiate parallel agreements, at the same time, same place.

Union aim is a master contract in the industry and protection against mechanization and modernization, as longshoremen in west coast U.S. ports, Hawaii and Alaska have obtained.

This plan calls for a five-year joint trust fund based upon wages of men displaced by machinery and located in other jobs. The fund would be used for pensions or early retirement payments.

Longshoremen contend the operators realize a greater profit through automation as they are able to load and discharge ships faster, making more ports in a shorter time.

WANT PROTECTION

"We are not opposed to machines, but we want protection to go along with them," Mr. Ball said.

West Coast American longshoremen have pledged their support to a B.C. strike, and would strike also, if necessary, he said.

He said wage parity—hourly rates range from $2.94 to $3.14—is a small issue compared with job security.

The members are ready to resume negotiations anytime after 8 a.m. Sunday.

Ask The Times

Q. To settle a bridge argument: Both sides vulnerable, game apace, one side scored their two games after the other and claimed because games were scored together they were entitled to 700 for the rubber. I know better, but I cannot convince our opponents that they were only entitled to 500 for the rubber because we also had a game. R.H.E.

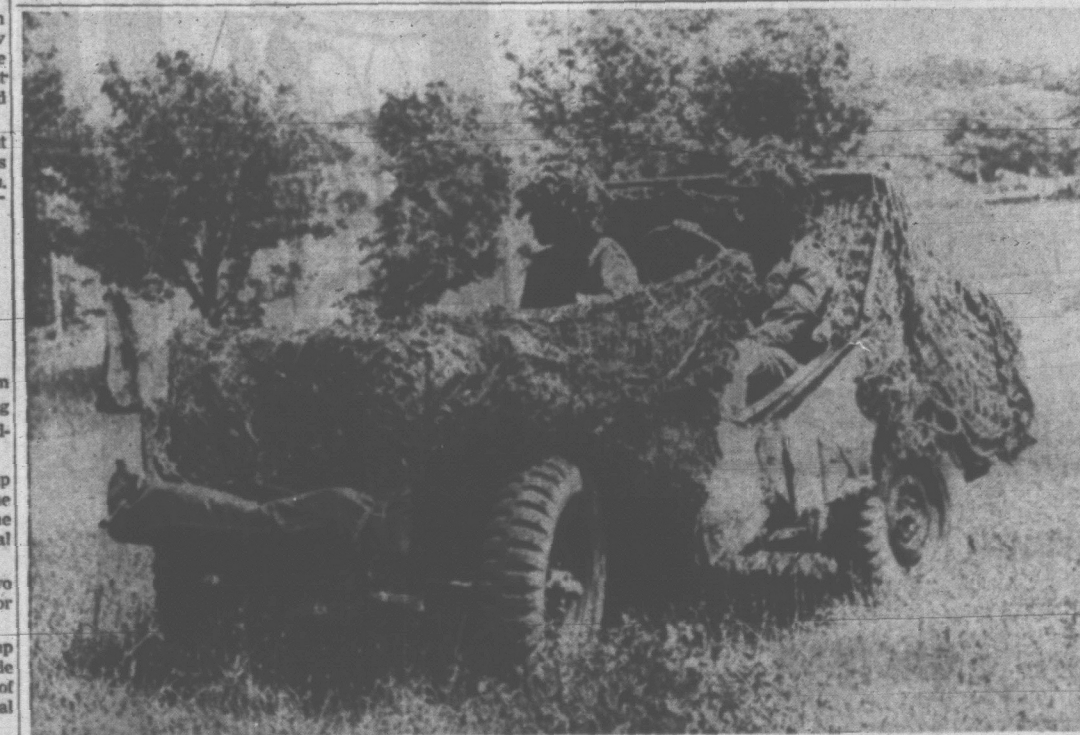

A. You are quite correct.

Q. Is Canada still exporting as much uranium to the U.S. as she has done in the past?—M.L.

A. No. Since Canada sold a maximum of 15,900 tons of uranium oxide in 1959 to the U.S., deliveries have since fallen steadily; this fall reflects the fall in demand from Canada's main customer. However, uranium continues to play an important role in the Canadian economy and is high on the list of export commodities.

PPCLI TO PARADE—ON WHEELS

Camouflaged quarter-ton jeep used for wartime reconnaissance is one of many mechanized units which will be seen in parade of more than 700 officers and men of the First Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry which will wind through the city streets Friday evening.

The battalion is leaving for Hemer, Germany, in October and will be replaced at Work Point Barracks by the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, now serving in Germany with Canada's brigade group.

Lt. Col. G. G. Brown, commanding officer, said he was very conscious of the "great kindness" the Victoria public has shown to the regiment during its six years in the city. "From our point of view this is one of the pleasantest spots in Canada and we are sorry to leave. But we are all looking forward to going to Germany as part of Canada's contribution to the NATO plan."

The battalion will be stationed in Germany for three years, returning to Canada in the fall of 1966.

Leaving Work Point Barracks at 8:25 p.m., the parade will proceed along Esquimalt Road to Point Ellice bridge, continuing to Douglas Street and south along Douglas to Simcoe, through Beacon Hill Park and east to west on Dallas Road.

Mayor R. B. Wilson will take a salute on Dallas Road, below Beacon Hill Park, at 7 p.m.

This will be the battalion's last parade before leaving this month for special training at Camp Wainwright, Alta.

"It will give the people of Victoria a chance to see us as a fully-equipped infantry battalion," Col. Brown said.

Vancouver Doctor Suspended

VANCOUVER (CP)—A city doctor has been suspended from practising for six months for infamous and unprofessional conduct. He is Dr. Samuel William Baker.

Tories Shaken By Scandals

(Times News Services)

LONDON—Prime Minister Macmillan's government was rocked today by its biggest scandal with the admission of its war minister that he stood up in the House of Commons and lied about his relationship with a red-haired London playgirl.

Court Ousts Hysterical Christine

LONDON (Reuters)—Model Christine Keeler was ordered out of the courtroom and dissolved in hysterics today during the trial of the Negro singer she has accused of assaulting her.

The red-haired beauty, whose affair with war minister John Profumo caused his resignation Wednesday in a scandal that rocked the nation, was taken from the court when she shouted "Why don't you shut him up" as the singer testified in the prisoner's box.

Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon said "regardless of all those things she has caused me, I have loved her with all my heart."

Miss Keeler, 21, says "Gordon, 31, her onetime lover, attacked her outside her apartment—punching her, and kicking her in the chest."

Gordon started the court when he said he wanted to subpoena osteopath Dr. Stephen Ward, who has been linked with the model and with Profumo. He said Christine told him she had known Ward since she was about 14 and had been working as a call girl since she was 17.

He said he met Christine about two years ago in a London restaurant.

The model denied Wednesday that she had been expecting Gordon's baby when she disappeared before a trial at which she was the star witness and went to Spain.

Beacon Hill Swans Guard Lone Cygnet

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Raising a family, even in peaceful Beacon Hill Park, is a hazardous business.

Of two cygnets hatched by a swan on an island in Fountain Lake last Monday, only one remained today.

The other had disappeared when Times photographer Bill Halbert visited the lake—and no one knows what has become of it.

This was the first blessed event of its kind in the park for seven years, according to parks administrator W. H. Warren, and it was hoped the two cygnets would survive.

"Our swans have been sterile in recent years," Mr. Warren said. "One contributing factor might be that nesting swans have been disturbed by the increasing number of visitors."

Other species of wild birds are nesting in the park. But their young are threatened by well-meaning citizens who pick them up and turn them over to the authorities.

"If young birds are seen under trees or shrubbery, the nest is sure to be close and they should be left alone," said caretaker H. W. "Sandy" Haydon.

He added that blackbirds, killdeer, and robins are the most numerous among the young that are now being hatched in the park.

BURIED IN ST. PETER'S

Fear of War Haunted Pope

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—Pope John XXIII, the 261st pontiff, was laid to rest in the crypt of St. Peter's Basilica tonight, a few yards from the remains of St. Peter, the first pope.

The Pope's body was carried from the basilica itself and through the door of St. Martha down to the crypts below where his predecessors lie—after the cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church paid their final homage to the pontiff.

As the Pope had requested, only a few persons accompanied the coffin to the crypt—his peasant relatives, six cardinals and several canons of St. Peter's.

The coffin will be moved once again—to the palace of St. John Lateran next to the basilica being converted into the late pontiff's orders into the headquarters of the diocese of Rome.

The Pope—who was also Archbishop of Rome—asked in his final testament, made public today, that the palace be his final resting place.

Earlier, a tide of humanity, perhaps 2,000,000 strong, paid homage to the Pope, who dedicated his life to a fight for peace and died fearing war.

As the mourners moved through the great basilica, prelates said masses at altars around the body.

Msgr. Loris Capovilla, the Pope's personal secretary, said one of the masses and then told the mourners that Pope John had said on his deathbed: "I am afraid. I am afraid. I fear that my children might

THE CRISIS IN QUEBEC

Rural Areas and Cities Both Have Grievances

(This is the third article in a series on Quebec's position within confederation. The author, S. Peter Regenstreif, has studied the Canadian political scene so intensely that he was able to forecast the last federal election results with a high degree of accuracy.)

By S. PETER REGENSTREIF

The Revolution of Rising Expectations.

The present era has been characterized in such terms by many observers and there is no doubt that of all the regions of Canada, Quebec is the one which is most firmly in its grip.

The revolution takes many forms and it has permanently changed the structure of Quebec politics. It has brought a progressive and dynamic government to power in Quebec city. It has also been responsible for the appearance of two forces which are essentially outside the routine confines of the established party system: Social Credit and the Separatist movement.

These remarkable political developments have their roots in rapid industrialization, explosive urbanization and increased communications, particularly in the use of television. These have all come together to impose different needs and to arouse new aspirations.

It is incorrect to assume, however, that the effect of the revolution has had uniform impact across the province. After all, the vast area called Quebec contains a complex society, with varying class structure, urban-rural differences and a historic cleavage between French and English that now seems to be intensifying with each passing day.

The two novel political movements which have emerged in the past few years in Quebec, Social Credit and Separatism, gain their support from the opposite ends of the French-Canadian social spectrum and from different parts of the province.

What support the Separatists have is among some metropolitan (that is, Montreal and Quebec city) professionals, students and intellectuals. On

Few Reminders Today Of D-Day Excitement

PARIS (AP)—Nineteen years ago today Allied troops stormed ashore along the bright beaches of the French coast in the drive to liberate Europe from Nazi tyranny.

It was a time of blood and of jubilation, of fierce joy and of easy fear. For the armed might of Hitler's armies it was the first step toward downfall and defeat.

As years passed by, and the shattering clamor of war faded into memory, D-day lapsed slowly into the limbo of another time, another world.

Today, no flags marked its anniversary in Paris. No parades struttled by in tribute. The men who survived the savage onslaughts of Omaha Beach, at Red Beach, along the curves and swags of French coastline, have long since gone.

TORIES

But what the Times of London called Profumo's "shocking admission" drew the biggest headlines of all.

The scandal ended the political career of one of the most promising younger members of the Conservative party. Profumo had most of the ingredients of success: A beautiful wife, former actress Valerie Hobson; education at Harrow and Oxford; a distinguished army record in the Second World War, during which he rose to the rank of brigadier; the youngest member of Commons at the age of 25, and regular promotion in government posts.

The first whispers of the affair were heard in March. The Daily Express reported March 14 that Profumo had offered to resign for personal reasons. The government denied it.

During the same period London papers were reporting that model Christine Keeler was missing after failing to appear at the trial of another Negro who was convicted of trying to shoot her. Profumo eventually connected her with Profumo, and it was whispered she had been hidden to protect persons in high places.

March 22, Profumo admitted in Commons he knew Miss Keeler socially but said there was nothing improper in their relationship. He denied having anything to do with her disappearance and threatened to sue anyone who challenged his story.

May 7, Dr. Stephen Ward, a high society osteopath who had entertained Miss Keeler, Profumo and others, wrote Home Secretary Henry Brooke that Profumo's statement about Miss Keeler had not been entirely true.

It was understood Ward also wrote similarly to Labor Party Leader Harold Wilson, now visiting in Canada.

In the Commons Chuter Ede, former Labor home secretary, gave notice he intended to ask Brooke "what information he has received from Dr. Stephen Ward in connection with inquiries carried out by the metropolitan police and what action he proposes to take." Brooke was due to answer in Parliament June 20.

Parliamentary informants said many legislators believe that it was this innocent-looking question, loaded with political dynamite, that triggered Profumo's confession.

Chant Happy With Results

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia is developing one of the best-integrated high school-higher education systems to be found anywhere in the world. Dean S. F. N. Chant said today.
